Lynncrest Holsteins, a Lebanon County dairy operation that also specializes in breeding registered Holsteins, has been named the winner of the 1998 Holstein USA Distinguished Young Holstein Breeder Award. Owned by Kirby and Sheryl Horst, Lynncrest Holsteins is the fourth Pennsylvania breeding operation to receive the relatively new award. Kirby holds the halter of the queen of the donor cows of their merchandising operation, 6-year-old Lynncrest Converse Happy-ET, an Excellent-91 homebred animal that has 15 sons sold for artificial insemination, and 60 embryos exported. From the left, the rest of the family is Sheryl, Chad, 6, Chanelle, 13, and Chelsea. 10.

Lynncrest Farm To Receive National Holstein Young Breeder Award

VERNON ACHENBACH JR.
Lancaster Farming Staff
NEWMANSTOWN (Lebanon Co.) — In about two weeks, Kirby and Sheryl Horst are expected to be asked to come forward from their seats at the national Holstein convention in Boise, Idaho, and receive the organization's national Distinguished Young Holstein Breeder award.

The couple, owners of Lynncrest Holsteins located in the rural Newmans town area of Lebanon County, and their three children, are to be flown by Holstein USA to the convention to receive the award.

In front of hundreds of fellow, devoted Holstein breeders, they are to stand, be recognized, and applauded for a job well done.

According to Holstein USA officials, the Horsts are also to receive a monetary award, an engraved plaque commemorating the honor, and to have their names added to a permanent roster of award recipients on display at the Holstein USA national headquarters in Brattleboro, Vermont.

The selection of the national winner was only made recently, and last week, the Horsts still seemed a little stunned at the news, as though it hadn't quite sunk in yet.

What it means is that they are recognized as national leaders among young couples who breed desirable registered Holsteins.

Yet, they said they didn't want people to get the wrong idea.

Winning the award is the highest honor for them as breeders of registered Holsteins, marking perhaps the highlight of their career, according to Kirby.

But they said they realize what the award means and

GROVE CITY (Mercer Co.) — Typically, a farmer's day is spent on the farm.

This often means that, unlike other industries where professionals gather to work and talk shop, farmers work independently — often missing out on face-to-face input from peers.

A group in Erie and Crawford counties, however, has learned that the old adage about "strength in numbers" can apply to dairy farmers, just as it can to a herd of Holsteins.

And, just as many farmers strive to keep their breeding cycles in sync, this group has learned that bringing operators into sync can boost morale, cut

Here's Your June Dairy Month Issue

June is dairy month and it's time again to honor the dairy industry for efforts made to supply the nation with the fine products made from milk. The milk mustache and the "got milk?" slogan have become national symbols of quality and excellence. But with most people in our country now two, three, or more generations removed from the farm, it becomes increasingly important for farmers to promote their products and educate people about the contributions agriculture makes to keep an adequate food supply coming to the nation's tables. In this special issue of Lancaster Farming, we join in this promotional effort. Many of the features, columns, news reports, and advertising messages carry the theme of milk. Read and enjoy.

Farming is from the heart, though that also means that everyone in the Ernie and Wanda Derr family has responsibilities on Heavens Blessin's Farm. That includes their youngest child, 7-year-old Ashley Derr, who stands here between two Jersey calves that she is in charge of feeding. See story on page C 2.

#1 in Rumen Availability Pennfield's Super Flaked Corn™

THE PROCESS INVOLVES

- 1) Cleaning the corn
- 2) Soaking or steeping the corn for a prescribed period of time
- 3) Applying steam to the corn before rolling
- 4) The specially conditioned corn is then rolled between 2 large rollers
- 5) The wet flat rolled corn is then processed by a special unit that removes the moisture and dries the finished flake back down to normal corn moisture
- 6) The finished product resembles a bright yellow corn flake (makes you want to get a bowl full and add milk and sugar)

WHY IS SUPER FLAKED CORN BETTER?

Flat rolled steam flaking disrupts the cellular structure of the corn kernels (gelatinization) and increases sites for microbial attachments resulting in improved starch (carbohydrate) digestion in the rumen. In simple terms, the cow uses more of the nutrients because the rumen bugs can get to them and much less corn nutrient goes out in the manure.

Grain Market

St. Joseph, MO

DAILY NATIONAL GRAIN SUMMARY

The Boards staged a late hour rally today to push grain and soybean bids higher on the close. Wheat 1 to 7 cents higher. Corn 1 to 2 cents higher. Sorghum steady to 3 cents higher. Soybeans steady to 5 cents higher. Prices are currently at a very low level, but processors and elevators have even bigger discount basis further down the road. This is true for new crop bids and even later this month. Ideal conditions exist early in the season for big production figures. There are large carry over stocks still in the storage bins. No export announcements on the books so far this week. Producers are looking at LDP. Hard Red Winter Wheat in most places is already 30-60 cents and Soft Winter Wheat 40-70 cents and combines have not even made the first rounds yet. Corn is not doing too bad, zero to two or three cents most places. Soybeans are rather costly right now. The majority of the counties have over 1.00 a bushel and a record crop is predicted by many analysts. When the farmers make the last runs and put the soybean drills under the shed for this year they rush down to the FSA offices to sign up.

JUNE 7-13, 1999

KING KAMEHAMEHA I DAY

June is "Try a Papaya" month in Hawaii, and time to honor King Kamehameha on June 11, the warrior-king who united the Hawaiian chain of islands early in the 19th century. Festivities usually start a week before with the lei-draping of his statue in downtown Honolulu. Originally formed by the activity of undersea volcanoes, Hawaii still boasts the world's largest active volcano, Mauna Loa, considered due for another eruption. It last blew its top in March and April 1984, when it threatened the city of Hilo. Nearby Kilauea, which shares a common source of magma on the Hawaiian hot spot, has been in constant, quiet eruption since January 1983.

- In the dairy business, income over feed cost is the name of the game. Pro-Lix liquid feed supplements offer dairymen the means to maximize this value while getting the most from their cow's natural abilities.
- Pro-Lix liquid feed supplements are concentrated sources of just what ordinary feeds lack: protein, energy, vitamins, minerals -- everything animals need for economical milk production and growth.
- For replacement heifers, Pro-Lix means faster maturity and assurance that they'll get to the milking herd on time. If you trust your heifers to forage alone, they might not make it (Bovatec is Available).
- For lactating cows, the nitrogen content of Pro-Lix means plenty of protein available for milk production and growth.
- Finally, for dry cows, Pro-Lix not only helps maintain their health during the dry period it prepares them for the next lactation. The Ca:P ratio in Pro-Lix helps control milk fever, while the Vitamin E and selenium aids in clean-up after the birth of a calf.

Best of all, Pro-Lix works with all types of pasture grass or forage, as a free-choice supplement, a top-dressing, or a ration mix.

The payoff is healthier animals and economical production, all year round!

The Building you want. The Lease you need.

We Salute our Dairy Farmers.

Telmark has been leasing equipment for over 30 years. Did you know that we've been leasing new buildings for that long too? Consider:

- Tax deductibility and accelerated write-offs: Lease payments are income tax deductible over the term of the lease compared to 20-year depreciation of farm buildings and 39-year depreciation of commercial buildings. Could reduce tax liability this year.
- Low upfront costs: As little as one monthly lease payment.
- Flexible lease term: Building lease terms from five to fifteen years.
- Customized payment schedules: Lease payment schedules are specially designed to match your cash flow.

First: Talk with a qualified builder to determine your needs and building cost.
Then: Call your Telmark representative for your financing.

OPINION

why the cow?*

First of all, there just aren't many pictures of dairy farmers around. They're too busy working their farms to take time out for photo sessions. Second, it's June – and June is Dairy Month – so they're busier than ever right now. It is prime milk drinking season, you know.

But picture or no picture, we still wanted to tip our hats to the men and women responsible for the products that are part of our everyday lives. From milk to butter to cheese.

Now about the cow. Since dairy farmers are such a hardworking lot with little time to dillydally, they tend to speed through publications like this pretty quickly. So, to make sure they'd stop and read this, we chose a photo of the one thing that always gets their attention.

*Now Is

June Is Dairy Month

The time of year we honor our dairy farmers, and the fine products made from milk. With more people in our country becoming two or three generations removed from farms, it becomes increasingly important for farmers to promote and educate people about the importance of their commodities, their farm businesses, the wholesomeness and nutritional value of the food they produce.

This requires farmers to be good neighbors. As our farming operations grow, farmers need to be more concerned about the image they present in the community. Thus, part of promotion includes landscaping, supporting community activities, being sensitive to the environment and knowing your neighbors.

For many people, the impression of the dairy industry is your farm. In addition to supporting general industry promotion programs, do not forget the many ways your farm is promoting dairy products. Wear your milk mustaches with pride!

To Be Safe

This spring has seen a rash of farm accidents. At least one farmer and one small child have been killed and one farmer seriously injured in tractor accidents in Lancaster County this year. Although some accidents are out of our control, most accidents can be prevented. The happen when we let our guard down or take unnecessary risks. Consider the following rules for your farm:

1. Never have small children on a tractor.
2. Keep children away from busy areas. We do not allow children to play on roads or highways. Jeffrey Stoltzfus, Eastern Lancaster County School District Adult Farmer Instructor, observes many farm driveways are busier than many roads.
3. Keep power take off (PTO) shields in place. Replace them after making repairs.
4. Make sure pesticides are stored away from children.
5. Talk about safety with your family at least once a week. Remember farm safety pays. How much would it cost you to hire someone skilled enough to make the decisions and do the work you do on the farm? If you could find such a person, you probably could not afford to hire him or her.

To Monitor Hay

According to Robert Anderson, Lancaster County Extension Agronomy Agent, baling hay too green may cause heating that could burn down the hay storage facility.

Every year a barn usually burns due to spontaneous combustion caused by storing hay too wet. Hay should not be stored until the moisture content reaches 20 per cent or less. At higher moisture levels, there is a greater risk of a fire.

In addition, hay which is baled above 20 per cent has a higher risk of becoming moldy and dusty. To be safe from fires, inspect hay mows at least twice each week during the harvest season.

Check for hot spots. Hot spots should be checked for their exact temperature using a thermometer. If hay temperatures reach 150 degrees, there is a danger of fire and a daily monitoring of hay temperatures is recommended. If temperatures reach 160 degrees, monitoring should be at four intervals.

Fire pockets can be expected if the temperature of the hay reaches 175 degrees. You should notify the local fire department to be on standby and be ready to move hay. If temperatures reach 185

THE GOOD EARTH June 6, 1999

Background Scripture:

Genesis 1:1 through 2:4a

Devotional Reading:

Psalms 104:24-35

Upon being told that God had created the heavens and the earth in six days, a little boy asked his teacher: "What business had God been in since?" Good question!

An there are a number of different answers with which people reply. Some believe that God has mostly been unemployed since he finished creation. Others would say that it is not so much unemployment as retirement. Still others believe that God has been only part-time since he got the world running like a good machine.

There are others who, like myself, believe that God is still in the same job he had millions of years ago, that the Creation was just the first phase of a long-term project. Jesus himself says: "My Father is working still..." (Jn 5:17) and many texts in the Bible portray a creator who is still creating, still nurturing his creation toward his purpose. I think God is still in the same business.

The Genesis story of creation convinces me of that. In the ancient world it was believed by many that the world was brought into being by accident. The story in Genesis 1, however, indicates a world created, not by accident, by intention and action: "Let there be light," commands God, "and there was light."

Before the first fiat of creation, all was "without form and void, and darkness was upon the face of the deep." On the very first day of creation, however, was begun a process of bring order out of the chaos. Every decree of creation follows a well-devised plan and suggest a goal. The God of Genesis—which means "beginning"—has a plan and a purpose.

TIME'S TREADMILL

Our whole modern idea of "progress" stems from Genesis. In antiquity, time was generally conceived as being cyclical. Just as there was an endless cycle of seasons, many people believed that time and existence are a closed loop, without beginning or ending. The God of Genesis, however, gave the Hebrews a different concept of time, a linear one with a beginning and an ending. They saw time moving on an incline between Creation and the fulfillment of God's plan.

Even though that is no longer the novel idea that it once seemed, there are still lots of people who see the world as purposeless. That kind of view makes life seem meaningless and there are many who see the world as a hostile place and time as an enemy.

God's plan begins with light; "Let there be light." Just as the chaos was changed by God's order, so the darkness of the chaos was transformed by light. Light is one of the most enduring spiritual symbols in the world. Light contends with and is victorious over darkness. Touched by the Spirit of God, people are enlightened. In proclaiming the coming of the Messiah, Isaiah said, "The people who walked in darkness have seen a great light..." (9-2) and "Arise, shine, for your light has come and the glory of the Lord is risen upon you" (60:1) In Jn 1, we read, "The light shines in the darkness and the darkness has not overcome it" (1:5).

VERY GOOD!

Some people believe that the world is essentially an evil place. In contrast to this attitude is the one we find in Genesis. "And God saw that the light was good." After each act of creation, Genesis tells us, "And God saw that it was good." And following his last act of creation, human beings, both male and female, God is even more pleased with the world he has made; "And behold, it was very good."

That might come as a surprise to those who believe that the human race is "just no good." Notice that we are to be created in the divine image. While human nature may be plagued by demonic temptations, there is always a divine flame that burns within each of us. It is not human nature that is to blame but what we have done with it. The same is true of the natural world.

Note, too, that we are to have dominion over the earth, but not to abuse, conquer, or rape it in the name of its own self-fulfillment. Our dominion over the earth must be tempered by God's purpose in creating us: we are to tend it like tenant farmers. It belongs, not to us, but to God and we are at best, stewards of that Good Earth.

Grazing Dairy Cows Requires Close Management Input

Peter Tozer
Assistant Professor

are now grazing farmers.

Grazing of dairy cows for six to seven months of the year is becoming a profitable alternative management strategy for some dairy producers in the United States, approximately 15 percent of the producers in Pennsylvania

The management input to manage a grazing-based dairy system successfully is higher than for a confinement fed dairy operation because the manager is balancing two complex biological systems that are both competitive and complementary - the cows and the available forages and pastures. Managers cannot simply put the cows out to graze.

The impact of the change in diet and nutrition management is huge, and needs to be given serious consideration when moving dairy cow diets from total mixed rations (TMR) to a pasture-based system. Feeding some supplements allows for greater flexibility in managing both the cows and pastures. Supplemental feeding, in most cases, can also increase the profitability of the dairy system.

The "cow" factor in grazing systems is critical. "Cow factor" means the breed of cow, the cow's genetics, and the capacity of the cow to eat sufficient feed to produce milk. Work in Canada and New Zealand has shown that cows of equivalent genetics have vastly different milk production and composition due to the types of feeding and management systems.

For example, the production of cows in New Zealand on a pasture-based system is approximately 49 per cent lower than Canadian cows under an intensive feeding system. Generally, cows do not consume sufficient pasture of high quality to produce milk to their genetic potential. Quality is measured as the ability of the pasture to provide all essential nutrients required to produce milk.

In making the change to grazing, there is a second biological system to manage - the pastures. The pasture resource will depend on the geographical location and the predominant pasture species of the region. However, since the productivity of most pastures will vary with seasonal weather changes, it is important to consider the availability of forage over the whole grazing season and plan herd management accordingly. Conserving feed in the form of hay or silage, and feeding supplements can reduce the impact of seasonal forage shortages. It is highly unlikely that a dairy farm can be financially successful on a fully pastured-based feeding regime unless the pastures and forages are well managed, some feed is conserved, and proper supplementation is practiced.

Pasture and forage management require the farm manager or herdsman to observe pasture conditions daily, if possible, since pasture quality and quantity can change rapidly. This is especially important in the spring, and during periods of hot dry weather when pastures dry out quickly. Very wet conditions can also adversely affect pasture growth, so good management is critical in these periods.

Knowing the quality and quantity of the forages available allows the manager to plan how much and what types of additional feed may be required to maintain milk production at a desirable and profitable level. Variability in the quality of forages has been shown to change the composition of milk, at times adversely. Therefore, to maintain consistent milk production and composition, good pasture management is essential.

Finally, the interactions of the cows and the pastures systems need to be considered. These interactions are important, since cows are more selective in their grazing if allowed free choice grazing rather than some type of controlled grazing, such as strip or rotational grazing. Another factor to consider in a grazing system is the intensity of grazing because most forages or pastures require a rest period to regenerate or persist over a long period of time. This is especially important for perennial forages, such as alfalfa.

The use of supplementary feed is encouraged because it allows the dairy farmer more flexibility in the management of both pastures and cows. Supplementary or complementary feeds can also provide essential nutrients that may not be present in sufficient quantities in the pastures. Most dairy producers in the United States feed some type of supplement. Producers do this to enhance the milk production of the cows or improve body condition, while increasing the profitability of the dairy system. Purchasing or conserving some supplemental feed gives the dairy

Trusted Borden® Brand Positions DFA In Booming Cheese Markets

In American retail markets gone mad for cheese (76 percent of all American households consume cheese, according to a USDA study), the Borden® brand and Elsie™ the Cow are household names to millions. To Dairy Farmers of America (DFA) members, they are an important entrée to grocery dairy cases and consumer loyalty across the country.

Through the acquisition of the Borden brand in late 1997, DFA demonstrated a strategic commitment to helping dairy farmers capture a larger share in highly competitive food markets. For nearly 70 years, Borden and Elsie have become icons for great taste, wholesome quality and value to cheese-loving Americans — a market in which milk producers have traditionally struggled to directly compete for profits.

"As we look to the future of our cheese business, we are excited by the acquisition of the Borden label," says Lonnie Spurgeon, senior vice president and chief operating officer for the DFA Dairy Foods Group. "It gives us access to an established and highly regarded name in the retail market, where we see opportunity for future growth and product expansion."

In light of a 1996 USDA study that shows domestic per capita cheese consumption climbing by 2 percent annually — up a total of 27 percent since 1980 — the acquisition provides an important foothold for DFA in cheese product development and marketing.

"Research has shown that, in the United States, Borden is the most recognized natural dairy brand, with an unaided consumer awareness score of 15 percent," Spurgeon explains. "That's a solid foundation upon which we can continue to build and grow Borden product success and reputation."

"The report also indicates that consumers identify convenience as the No. 1 reason to purchase single-wrapped cheese," Spurgeon adds. "That's where the Borden label comes in. Borden is one of the country's leading manufacturers of cheese singles in regular, low-fat and no-fat choices."

"Our vision is to expand Borden product lines while capitalizing on its brand name identity and product reputation," Spurgeon says. "When consumers buy cheese, we want them to think Borden."

farmer a degree of protection against adverse weather conditions without a reduction in milk production

The complexity of grazing-based dairying is increased due to the uncertainty of the pasture production and the response of the cows to this varying level of feed availability. However, effective management of grazing has the potential to increase profitability.

Pa. Farm Bureau Salutes State's Number One Ag Industry

CAMP HILL (Cumberland Co.) — June is dairy month and Pennsylvania Farm Bureau wants to know, what better way to salute Pennsylvania's dairy producers than to pass the Northeast Interstate Dairy Compact in the House of Representatives?

We are really hoping to get the compact passed in the House before the legislators break for the summer," said Guy Donaldson, president of Pennsylvania Farm Bureau.

"We feel it is crucial to Pennsylvania's dairy industry that the compact is passed. This proposed legislation will provide a safety net for dairy producers and a stable supply of milk for consumers," said Donaldson.

Farm Bureau has remained steadfast in its effort to get Pennsylvania into the compact.

"We know that a thriving dairy industry is vital to the future of Pennsylvania agriculture," said Donaldson.

"In addition to the compact we are working to not only improve profits, but to control costs through local tax reform, and by keeping a lid on unnecessary and potentially costly environmental and food safety regulations. These efforts will benefit all of agriculture, including Pennsylvania's dairymen, and the consumer."

Dairy is the largest segment of Pennsylvania's agricultural industry. It generates more than $1.5 billion for the state's economy.

According to the National Agriculture Statistics Service, Pennsylvania's 10,200 dairy farm families with their 639,000 cows produce 10.7 billion pounds of milk and rank fourth in the nation in milk production.

Since it was designated in 1992, milk has been Pennsylvania's official beverage.

Pennsylvania Farm Bureau is a voluntary, statewide farm organization which represents 27,000 farm and rural families in 54 county farm bureaus.

Understand The Records Rating System

BRATTLEBORO, Vt. — DHIA no longer designates test plans as "official" or "unofficial," thus providing dairy producers the ability to choose the amount of testing that they need.

As a result, not all production records are calculated with an equal amount of information and supervision.

Therefore, it is up to a buyer of cattle to decide if the record provided has been produced under sufficient testing procedures.

Holstein Association USA has developed a means of better understanding how a record was produced. The Association's TriStar production records system involves showing stars and Data Collection Ratings (DCRs) to indicate how much testing and monitoring went into a record.

Records shown on Official Holstein PedigreesSM are designated this way and the Association is encouraging the use of this effective system in advertisements, sale catalogs and other promotion efforts.

The stars show which TriStar service option an animal was enrolled in while the record was being produced.

Three stars (★★★) are used for Premier records which require the highest level of testing and monitoring, two stars (★★) for Deluxe records and one star (★) for Custom records.

The stars are similar to the three-letter symbols that once were used, such as DHR for DHIR records.

DCRs are new values that indicate the amount of information collected through the DHIA system.

Higher DCRs mean that more supervision, milk weights, and component samples were involved in the calculation of the lactation total.

A dairy cattle buyer has every right to make decisions based on all of the information that can be made available.

If stars and DCRs are not shown in an advertisement, the record shown may have been made with a traditional test plan with two milkings weighed each month or with a quarterly AM/PM test plan with only three milkings weighed during the entire 305-day lactation. Buyers won't know unless the records are labelled.

For more information about the Holstein Association's TriStar program call 800-952-5200 and speak with a customer service representative.

Penn State Extension Develops Agent Teams To Provide Service

GROVE CITY (Mercer Co.) -

As milk production gets more scientific, it is difficult, most agree, for producers to remain up to date on all aspects of dairy technology.

And much like farmers need knowledge of animal health, economics, and agronomy, so must those who advise them - the extension agents who provide help and information on a variety of topics.

"As the information that we distribute becomes more and more technical," explains Erie County agent George Wilcox, "it needs to be more and more tailored to the specific farm."

"These broad-blanket, one-size-fits-all recommendations that were done in the past just don't fit anymore. They have to be tailored to each individual farm."

For this reason, he says, a few cooperative extension offices around the United States have begun to change the way they function - sharing more specialized staffs to cover wider geographic areas.

One such project, a collaboration between the Mercer, Crawford, and Erie offices, employs a team of specialists, rather than the generalists of times past, to collectively serve the three-county region.

The Dairy Extension Team, as they informally call themselves, is made up of George Wilcox, specializing in dairy production, John Tyson, an ag engineer with experience farmstead layout and planning; Dave Dowler, a farm management agent; Joel Hunter, an agronomist, and Dave Baver, a veterinarian whose focus is nutrition and animal health.

Although all team members do not occupy the same office, they are housed in their respective "home" county locations, and farmers are put in touch with agents on a case-by-case basis, depending on which has the skills most compatible with a particular problem or question.

Although the team implementation is new to Pennsylvania, formed to work in a multi-county capacity, members say there are several states with similar structures.

One New York group has been implementing the concept for 10 or 12 years, Crawford-based Dave Dowler points out, with a Michigan group forming five or six years ago.

The local unit was officially completed last fall with the hiring of Dave Baver, he says, but assembling the group has been an ongoing project, in the works for about 10 years - with input from administrators as well as agents who work in the field.

"It's a group project," agrees Wilcox. "We've looked at that possibility and how we could better serve the dairy industry for several years, and decided that expertise was needed in agronomy, ag engineering, dairy production, and farm management."

"With the advent of a vacancy in Mercer County, we decided that what we were lacking the most was an in-depth expertise in animal health and the biosecurity industry. That's when Dave Baver was added to the group."

"We've been talking about it for a number of years, and as vacancies occurred, we hired the help we thought we've needed. This is the first time we've been 100 percent staffed. This last year we've really been visible as a team."

One reason for this - and probably the reason that more offices haven't begun to assemble such groups, the agents say - is that, in order to meet all of the job requirements in their geographic areas, dairy agents have always needed broad skill sets.

To replace these generalists with specialists means doing so over a period of years -- as job vacancies occur.

Despite the fact that the dairy extension team has achieved this change in an official capacity, its members are quick to point out that, in order to effectively serve producers, many Pennsylvania agents have always worked cooperatively across county lines - sharing their time and expertise with neighboring agents and farmers as needed.

The Erie, Crawford, and Mercer team is simply the first to be formalized - with each member hand-picked for his specific focus and what it adds to the group as a whole.

By hiring specialists, says Wilcox, the group can offer more to farmers:

"The first benefit," he says, "is we've got individuals out here responsible for keeping track of the latest development in a given area or field - on the cutting edge as far as new technology or methods. Second is the access part of it: We've got access to the

Alternative Waste Treatment Could Influence Ohio's Development

COLUMBUS, Ohio — Small communities and subdivisions may no longer have to contract with a nearby municipality to connect to its sewage system for waste treatment.

Alternative waste treatment that relies on constructed wetlands and other natural methods could show developing communities to manage their own sewage, said Michael Ogden, a registered professional engineer and president of South West Wetlands Group, a company that specializes in designing alternative waste water treatment systems.

"This is a hot political issue because it causes debate over who's going to control development surrounding a city, either the municipality with its centralized sewage system or the surrounding townships using alternative systems,"

Ogden said.

Ogden is one of several participants who will discuss the pros and cons of small community waste-water treatment technology and centralized versus decentralized sewage treatment at the upcoming statewide conference, "Better Ways to Develop Ohio," June 24-25, at the Columbus Athenaeum in Columbus. He will speak at a breakout session from 8:30 a.m. to 10 a.m. on June 25. The conference will address issues such as how Ohio should grow, where it should grow, and who pays for that growth.

Traditionally, waste-water treatment and disposal for small communities and subdivisions have been handled by running sewer interceptors out from a nearby municipality. This caused the growth of these areas to be dictated by where the sewer line went, Ogden said. Choosing an alternative system would give the surrounding areas more control over their growth.

"It doesn't have to be the way it has been. Now communities have a choice," he said. "With a small community waste-water treatment system, you need not rely on the big city's ability to fund and establish sewer lines, and the operating costs of the alternative systems are only about 10 percent of the cost of municipal treatment."

With alternative waste treatment systems, sewage is initially collected at each home or building in what's called an interceptor tank. The tanks filter most of the organic solids and all other trash from the waste water. Water goes to the treatment system via a small diameter sewer system. The waste water then flows through a constructed wetland or some other natural filter where the remaining organic solids are removed. The treated water, which only contains a small amount of nitrogen, is then applied to golf courses, farmland, prairies, woodlands or some other land area for final treatment.

But the alternative systems do raise some concerns.

The new systems could allow major urban-type development to occur in rural areas that don't have the services to support them, said Bill Habig, executive director of the Mid-Ohio Regional Planning Commission and the session's moderator.

Conference registration is $85 for both days if you register before June 18 and $100 if you register after that date. Breaks and lunch are included in the registration cost. For more information, contact Molly Bean at (614) 292-6962. Or you can obtain conference information over the Internet (<http://www2.ag.ohio-state.edu/~landuse/conference/>).

latest information and problem-solving capabilities."

The drawbacks, he says, include bigger travel budgets, and a more urgent need for good communication.

"With staff members spending a high portion of their time out in the field," he adds, "communication links and being able to reach people is critical and tough."

"It's no longer a one-phone-call or one-stop-shopping relationship. Farmers have to get to know more than one person."

Gov. Ridge Proclaims June As Dairy Month

HARRISBURG (Dauphin Co.) — Gov. Tom Ridge has proclaimed June as dairy month in Pennsylvania to recognize the important role of dairy farmers and the dairy industry in keeping Pennsylvania's economy strong and its citizens fit and healthy.

Earlier this year, Gov. Ridge and his mother, Laura, appeared on billboards to salute the efforts of Pennsylvania's dairy farmers and the "got milk?" campaign sponsored by the Pennsylvania Dairy Promotion Program.

Pennsylvania is the fourth-leading milk producing state in the nation.

The commonwealth also is a national leader in the production of other dairy foods, ranking second in the annual production of ice cream and frozen dairy products, fourth in the production of butter, and sixth in the production of cheese.

"Last year, our 10,200 dairy farms produced more than 10.7 billion pounds of milk with on-farm sales valued at more than $1.53 billion," Gov. Ridge said.

"Pennsylvania is proud of its dairy industry and the important contribution it makes to our economy and the welfare of our citizens."

GEORGE F.W. HAENLEIN
Retired Specialist
Dairy Extension
University of Delaware

NEWARK, Del. — It used to be that we would select against animal temperament in our dairy herds.

It is not enough that dairy farmers, feeders and milkers of dairy animals want to be gentle and understanding in daily handling. In addition, a certain behavior on the part of the animals is needed to ease management and avoid accidents to people and animals.

As a youngster growing up on a small dairy farm in the south German mountains, I worked with Milking simmentals.

I remember vividly how much trouble the first milking of a just-fresh heifer often was. A new event to the heifer, it was painful because of her sensitive swollen udder; she also missed her newborn calf.

The result was a great deal of agitation and fear on her side and impatience on ours, which lead to hobbling and other restraints.

These tactics did nothing to reduce her fear, and may even have caused some kicking and injury to her or to us, or, at the very least, some spilled milk.

Understanding animal behavior in the wild or of domesticated animals, such as dogs, cats and horses, developed much sooner than inside the cow barn.

Cows were not considered intelligent or interesting for such studies.

They were held securely in stanchion barns for safe management of milking, feeding, treating, sleeping, even when they were left out to grazing pastures for part of the day or night.

In the early 1960s in the United States a revolution began on the dairy farm with a new management style of housing dairy cattle away from stanchions in so-called "loose housing" and "free stalls."

The stanchion safety restraint for handling cows disappeared, except for milking, when the cows had to march into a milking parlor. Otherwise, they were loose for feeding and sleeping.

It became obvious to farm managers and dairy scientists that they had better learn about cow behavior, since the cows were now free to interact with other cows that had different personalities or temperaments and with different managers.

At that time no textbook existed on the behavior of dairy cows, goats or sheep, because there was no extensive study, nor were official classes on farm animal behavior offered to college students.

I started one of the first courses in this country on the behavior of domesticated animals. Now every United States agricultural college offers such a course.

It is crucial to good dairy management to understand how dairy animals behave.

It is not enough to select against an undesirable temperament of animals within a herd, even though we now know that behavior traits are inherited. We now recognize that certain factors in the farm environment — including people — have a modifying influence on the behavior of farm animals.

New research from Denmark, published in the Journal of Dairy Science (82(1999): 720-727), reinforce the above discussion and brings new insight into understanding animal behavior by introducing the term "fearfulness."

Animals are fearful of anything new and unfamiliar; under less threatening conditions, however, they want to explore the new and become familiar with it.

If the experience is positive, it will reduce fearfulness toward the new, whether it's an object or a

If an animal is less fearful toward a certain person, then it is more easily handled by that person; it also is even less likely to kick.

On the other hand, rough handling of cows causes fearfulness, stress and less productivity.

This points up some important questions:

Do dairy animals remember and distinguish between individuals?

Do they discriminate between those who treat them gently and those who are harsh, scare them by shouting or sudden movements, or beat them?

Do dairy cows learn fear of certain people, of certain color of their clothing (for example, veterinary lab coats), or of certain environments?

This can have serious implications on the dairy farm when the principal milking person wants a vacation. How do the cows react to that relief person?

In this Danish study, 14 Holstein cows in mid-lactation were handled by two people, one was gentle and the other shouted and prodded (no rough mistreatment was applied).

The results showed clearly that cows distinguish between different people who have handled them before. Cow behavior during milking varied greatly according to the handler who was present.

However, color of clothing is one cue that cows used to discriminate between people, indicating the importance of the visual senses for discrimination by cows. When both handlers wore the same color clothing, the distinction between handlers disappeared, although a mix of visual, olfactory and auditory cues was used in people discrimination.

A significant variation also was found among different cows in their ability to distinguish between handlers, which indicates individual differences in cows with regard to learning ability.

Cows that were best at discriminating between the two handlers were most affected by fearfulness and restlessness during milking, had a faster heart rate and resulted in significantly less milk production. The latter was due probably to inhibition of the oxytocin let-down effect, leading to reduced or delayed milk ejection.

The same results recently were found in studies with dairy goats and Brown Swiss cows.

We have known for some time that a barking dog nearby cows being milked disturbs them; their fear of the dog releases the stress hormone adrenaline, which then blocks the oxytocin effect on milk letdown in the udder.

Now we know that cows are much more sophisticated in their distinction between familiar and unfamiliar people, their ways of handling, as well as other factors of the environment, which will result in significant differences in milk production.

These findings reinforce our strong belief that high productivity and profitability on the dairy farm goes hand in hand with concepts of animal welfare.

recognizes — that they have demonstrated a fair amount of Holstein breeding achievement and success, as well as sound farm business management, and that they have been fortunate to have been able to work for 18 years in the pursuit of establishing and maintaining a solid reputation for producing and selling good registered Holstein animals and genetics.

And they know what it doesn't mean — that they are better people than others.

"It's a very prestigious award," Kirby said. "When we think of how many outstanding breeders there are, not only in Pennsylvania, but the United States, and to be selected is a great honor. Probably the highlight of our career so far."

Sheryl said that they have been very fortunate and they are very grateful for their blessings, and thankful to God for providing them with opportunities to find some success to support themselves and their children, as well as for the many people they've come to know through Holstein breeding and dairying.

They said they are very grateful for the people they've met who've become friends and mentors.

Kirby said that as much as anything, they attribute their success

One of the prolific flush cows purchased by Lynncrest Holsteins is Windcrest Leadman Jessie-ET. She was purchased as a calf, and produced 17 sons for sale into artificial insemination units, and 55 embryos that sold internationally. She also gave farm owners Sheryl and Kirby Horst a daughter that also produced well and provided daughters that have generated interest from AI units and embryo marketing firms.

From top to bottom, is dam, daughter and granddaughter, all carrying the Lynncrest Holstein prefix. This cow family brings special satisfaction to Kirby and Sheryl Horst, owners of Lynncrest Holsteins and winners of the 1998 national Holstein Distinguished Young Breeder award. This top gal is Lynncrest Stan Haley, the first 40,000-pound milk per lactation producer for the Horsts, as well as the matron of their homebred flushing and embryo marketing effort. The cow family is noted for high fat components. Haley's production has averaged about 4 percent fat per lactation.

Lynncrest Stan Haley was crossed with Highlight Converse-ET to produce this Lynncrest Converse Happy-ET cow. Happy, also pictured with the family on the front page, has been a strong producer of fertilized eggs for the Horst family. She also produced good daughters. Her fat production has averaged about 5-percent.

One of the daughters of Happy, Lynncrest Bellwood Halfpint has become a top producing cow for the embryo marketing business done by Kirby and Sheryl Horst of Lynncrest Holsteins. Halfpint's first lactation as a 2-year-old was 4.6 percent.

to the support of many people in the Holstein community, especially some of the local Holstein breeders, such as Nelson Troutman, Andy Stoltzfus, etc., and others, who over the years shared ideas and information, and provided insights to opportunities for possible progress.

The couple, in their mid- to late 30s, said they are very excited about the honor and the upcoming trip to Boise.

They know the strength of the competition in vying for the award, and they know that many Holstein breeders before them, many not only in Pennsylvania, but nationally and internationally, have helped pave the way in creating a Holstein industry with breed value, and in providing and proving sound advice for ways to improve the breed.

For all Pennsylvania Holstein breeders, the Horsts' win also adds to the state's reputation and prestige.

The win marks the fourth time the award was presented to a Pennsylvania Holstein breeder since the national recognition program was begun in 1990.

Past winners include John and Sue Howard of Willow Street, Lancaster County; Steve and Chris Wood of Littlestown, Adams County; and Lloyd and Denise Pease of Susquehanna County.

The Horsts are also the third breeding operation from Lebanon County to win the state title.

It also means the Horsts have made some personal sacrifices, made some decisions about how to manage their farm and lives, and took some risks and were fortunate enough to have enough luck on their side with regard to dealing with those things over which they have no control.

But they have been working hard to minimize those things they cannot control.

For them that means communicating with the rest of the industry, as well as attempting to stay in touch with the rest of the world, being aggressive marketers of their cattle and promoters of the dairy industry, and doing their homework.

The Horsts were featured by Lancaster Farming a couple of years ago because of their involvement and successes with flushing high-indexing cows for merchandising embryos.

One of their donor cows, purchased at a national sale, was producing embryos in strong demand internationally. She was providing the Horsts with a good number of fertilized eggs for transplanting into recipient cows.

At the time, some may have considered that the Horsts were merely lucky.

It could have been one of those once-in-a-lifetime, happy turns of events, that can be short-lived and mysterious when they disappear.

But in the intervening years, the Horsts have established a herd and breeding track record of successes that has continued to grow, and the Horsts have been able to continue in the dairy industry with a bright outlook.

While the majority of their farm income comes from the sale of milk, the money they have made in merchandising cattle has given them a healthy boost toward achieving their long-term goal of paying off early the 95-tillable acre farm they purchased from Kirby's family in April 1995.

Dedication to their business and farm is also an expression of their stronger dedication and desire to be a family and raise their children on a farm.

"There is nothing more satisfying than raising a family on a dairy farm," Sheryl said.

"Our children enjoy the many wonders of nature on the farm. Our two daughters, Channele (13) and Chelsea (10), are involved in 4-H and enjoy showing their 4-H calves at local, district, and state shows.

"Chad enjoys riding bike and playing with the dogs — just being an ordinary active 6-year-old — but looks forward to showing a 4-H calf," she said.

"Raising the kids on the farm is the ultimate," Kirby said. "We wouldn't want to give up that lifestyle for anything."

In their award application, the Horsts stated, "Having registered Holsteins has, and will, give our children so many opportunities and benefits in 4-H and the Junior Holstein clubs. Each child learns valuable lessons in training a calf, and it sure is fun watching our kids show."

Averaging about a 55-cow milking string, they have no cows in the herd with a classification under 82 points. The herd has 13 Excellent cows, and that all combines to give them a BAA of 110.5 percent — a rating that ranks them third in the state and in the top 35 nationally.

(A BAA is a measure of the breed average classification by age group. A herd BAA is a way to recognize a herd of better than average breeding by comparing the classification of all of the animals to the current total average age classification of the breed.)

In the Horsts' application for the award, they reported that 1998 was good to them — at the time the herd was averaging 23,522 pounds of milk, but the end-of-year Pa.DHIA results (September 1998) showed a slightly higher average; they had their first 40,000-pound lactation cow; and they sold their first bull to Japan, and their 64th bull in artificial insemination.

According to the Horsts, they breed three different strategies within their herd — some are bred for index for genetic merchandising; others are bred for deep pedigree and type; and they also breed red & white Holsteins.

"For our herd, we feel the best way to reach goals is through a balanced blend of various kinds of genetics," Kirby said.

"After each sire summary, we like to select a group of bulls that are going to fill the needs of our herd, whether that may be index, contract animals, extreme type bulls, Red and White bulls, or the most marketable genetics.

"When selecting bulls, we consider udder; foot and leg composites; milk, fat and protein pounds. We like to use high-TPI bulls to satisfy our type concerns.

"We reevaluate and upgrade our requirements for bulls we are considering, and try to gather as much information as possible on prospective mating sires.

"We like to use the Red Book and information from AI (artificial insemination) organizations, as well as information we can gather from other breeders who might have seen some daughters of a particular sire.

"The last several years, we have placed strong emphasis on percent fat and protein, which has paid great dividends with some very marketable genetics."

They also acknowledged that they have been lucky.

"Breeding cattle is not an exact science, a little luck is needed as well. We enjoy working with great looking cows and expect our 2-year-olds to score high Good Plus, or Very Good in their first lactation, and Excellent by their third or fourth lactation.

"One ingredient of a good breeder not mentioned so far, is the ability to find a promising animal at a sale, to have an eye for a young cow that has potential to grow and mature into a fantastic individual.

"We've had the good fortune of finding several of those 'diamonds in the rough' over the past few years for bargain prices. Most of these animals were purchased as bred heifers, or unscored 2-year-olds."

Kirby said that the first 10 years of farming for he and Sheryl was fairly similar to others getting started.

But he enjoyed registered Holsteins, and breeding and seeing improvements. It's something that gives him a reward, and keeps his interest.

He said purchasing Windcrest Leadman Jessie-ET as a calf got them started into merchandising.

Jessie is a Very Good 89-point cow with an Excellent mammary. The Horsts sold 17 sons from her in AI and 55 embryos internationally. They also kept four daughters.

One of the daughters, Lynncrest Mountain Jamaica-ET, a Very Good 88 with an Excellent mammary and a 90-pound protein index has proven to be prolific.

But the cow family that they've been working with more, and that brings them more personal satisfaction is founded on a 3-month-old calf purchased for $800, Len-Lyn Winken Hope, VG-88, Ex-mammary.

They have four of her daughters, and one has produced especially well, Lynncrest Bell Boss Haley, VG-88, VG-mammary.

The three daughters have done well — Lynncrest Slocum Halo-ET, VG-88, Ex-mammary at 3 years; Lynncrest Slocum Holy-ET, VG-86, Ex-mammary at 3 years; and Lynncrest Majic Hillary, GP-83 VG-86 mammary at 1-10, a potential bull mother.

But Haley was their first homebred breeder. They flushed her as a virgin heifer and got Lynncrest Converse Happy-ET, Ex-91, Ex-mammary, with a first lactation record of 2-2, 365-day, 28,440 pounds milk, 1,413 pounds, or 5-percent fat, 990 pounds, or 3.2 percent protein.

Happy has become their most heavily contracted cow. She was the first homebred VG-89 Ex-mammary 2-year-old.

She has been successfully flushed resulting in 140 fertilized embryos recovered. Sixty-four of those were sold internationally, and 14 sons were sold to A.I.

Two of her sons have gone to Japan, one to Germany and 11 to United States AI units.

Eleven daughters were sold and 10 remain on the farm.

ANDY ANDREWS

CARLISLE (Cumberland Co.)

— Standing in front of a headlock gate, Jim Kulick held up a rubber cow slip, used to protect the hoofs of somewhat "downtrodden" dairy animals.

Kulick told a few school teachers from the Cumberland County area that cows' feet sometimes pose major health problems on the farm.

"Foot problems would include foot rot and warts, which can be very contagious," he said during the first annual Cumberland County Ag in the Classroom teacher tour, conducted late in April at the John and Julia Stover dairy farm near Carlisle.

Kulick spoke to the teachers about what dairy farmers learn to do to maintain optimum herd health.

The few that attended questioned the dairy farmers about the use of antibiotics and hormones. They asked him what the steel structure was that stood in back of him, near a gate leading into the freestall barn. The barn is curtain-sided with fans. A mister will be installed this summer, to douse the cows with water, cooling them.

Kulick demonstrated the headlock gate, using belts, to keep the cows in place while they are treated. He told them they are steadied easily that way.

He showed them the footpath that leads around the freestall area, where the cows walk through a puddle of copper sulfate.

"Foot problems would include foot rot and warts, which can be very contagious," Jim Kulick, center, said during the first annual Cumberland County Ag in the Classroom teacher tour, conducted late in April at the John and Julia Stover dairy farm near Carlisle.

To replace the greenhouse plastic, it cost about $500, Kulick told the tour group. The total cost of the structure was $8,500, which includes 1A crushed limestone. The building measures 32 by 100 feet. A new milk room was under construction near the entrance.

Gradually, the Stover Dairy, which includes about 1,100 acres, is moving toward becoming all-registered, which takes time, according to Jim Kulick, center. A recently constructed calf greenhouse provides good ventilation and "really helps knock down bacteria and viruses that can hit calves," said Kulick. The calves are moved to the open structure, with a crushed limestone floor, from when they are born to about four months. At the time of the tour, 30 calves were housed in the greenhouse, including some bull calves. There is room for 44 in all.

A double-8 milking parlor (which can someday expand to a double-10, Kulick noted) was installed on the dairy farm, owned by John and Julia Stover, and Ronald Stover, in 1995. Jim Kulick, son-in-law, helps manage the 196 head of registered and grade Holsteins, with about the same number of replacements.

Gradually, the Stover Dairy, which includes about 1,100 acres, is moving toward becoming all-registered, which takes time, according to Kulick.

The Stovers began a small herd on their home farm nearby in 1959. They expanded rapidly three years ago, from 60 to 200 head, building a new facility on the site, incorporating a freestall, a milking parlor, and a new calf greenhouse facility.

The herd on Pennsylvania DHIA records 22,300 pounds of milk, using BST. Feed is all TMR, constantly available to the cows. The milk is sold through the Mount Joy Cooperative. The Stovers are Class I shipper through Federal Order IV. Milking is twice a day, 4:30 a.m. and 4:30 p.m. to a 3,000-pound tank, emptied every other day.

Most of the cattle are homebred. Kulick is now buying all registered cattle to increase the quality and quantity of the Holstein herd.

The oldest cow is Sandy, about nine years old. The big milker is Monica, a 5-year-old who produces 40,000 pounds.

Kulick noted that using AI on the heifers has increased the quality of the herd.

"We've seen a big difference between those heifers and those bred using a bull," said Kulick. The udders are high, the feet and legs are in better shape, and the overall health is a step above what it used to be.

Somatic cell count is kept "as low as possible," he explained to the teachers. "The milk tastes better and cows will milk more."

Mount Joy pays a premium when SCC is kept below 300,000. The farm records about a 200,000 SCC, though it has gone as low as 160,000, Kulick said.

tall mats. They were to be installed by the end of April.

A recently constructed calf greenhouse provides good ventilation and "really helps knock down bacteria and viruses that can hit calves," said Kulick.

The calves are moved to the open structure, with a crushed limestone floor, from when they are born to about four months.

At the time of the tour, 30 calves were housed in the greenhouse, including some bull calves. There is room for 44 in all.

One bull included Luke, out of Blackstar. The bull will be moved to an AI commercial program.

To replace the greenhouse plastic, it cost about $500, Kulick told the tour group. The total cost of the structure was $8,500, which includes 1A crushed limestone. The building measures 32 by 100 feet.

A new milk room was under construction near the entrance.

The calves, weaned at three months, are fed a commercial calf feed. Each calf gets a metal cartag with the herd ID number.

The barn has a 400,000 gallon capacity underground manure storage. The floor is slatted. Kulick explained to the tour group how the manure is agitated, brought to consistency, pumped, and placed in manure spreaders, where it is applied to the fields.

There are 78 freestalls, with cement floor, and 72 cows on each side, in two groups. "If a cow wants to lie down, I would make sure I have a spot to lay her," said Kulick.

The farm already has been host to preschool and elementary school students. Also, middle school students were brought in under the special interest class program at the local schools.

The farm employs Mark Matula, full-time, and a couple part time, including Jared Brickner and J.P. Rebert. Also, Leo Raudabaugh helps on the farm, which includes the home farm near Carlisle and three other farms in the area.

Jim's wife, Ann, milks and his daughter Amy is in charge of calf feeding and helps relief milk.

Three years ago, Kulick decided to quit his home construction work and enter into dairy farming full-time. He said he enjoys working the cows and doesn't really care for fieldwork. Brother-in-law Ron does all the fieldwork.

In August 2000, the farm with be the site of the county's 250th anniversary, and will feature farm tours to accommodate about 700 people, Kulick noted.

The Penn State-sponsored teacher seminars allow teachers to see how agriculture works, taking them to "start at the product and see the process involved to the finished product," said Sallie M. Gregory, extension educator and 4-H youth development at Cumberland County extension.

The program is modeled on the highly successful teacher seminars conducted throughout the school year by the Berks County extension office. Berks County seminars are coordinated by Clyde Myers, extension agent.

Nancy Bauman, Upper Allen Elementary School third grade teacher in Mechanicsburg, said to

The tour group also toured the Land O'Lakes processing facility in Mount Holly Springs. There, James R. Gregory noted that the past couple of generations of children have been removed from the working farm experience. Many of them, said Bauman, are from the suburbs, and aren't exposed to rural experiences.

"They don't know anything about cows," she said.

Farmers Find Success, Fellowship Through Cooperative Purchasing costs, and help to promote efficiency

The group, formed three years ago by McKeane farmer Tom Rand with the help of extension agent George Wilcox, consists of about 45 members who meet monthly to share ideas, get information, and coordinate their buying efforts - taking advantage of group discounts on everything from bull semen to fax machines

Initially, Rand says, he assembled the group, known as the Erie County Dairy Producers, after attending a dairy days gathering and hearing about a New York co-op that had done group purchasing

"I called George Wilcox," Rand explains, "and said, 'How do we get one of these going?'"

"George said to get some farmers together, meet over lunch, and discuss some things," Rand said

"There were maybe 10 of us in the beginning, and that's what we did

"I think that's why it has worked out, because when we first got started we just sat down and had lunch and talked; we became friendly with each other," he said.

"Guys would come in and tell stories - maybe about a tractor breaking down - something funny that happened to them. We got to be like a family, and I think that's part of what's made it work - but the savings are pretty substantial."

And although the discounts stem largely from volume, Rand says a large part of saving also comes from paying in cash - a possible reason that many co-ops fail

"You need good people who will pay their bills," Rand said

"Everybody basically knows

we do cash transactions. If you buy something, you've got to pay for it right away. You can save a lot of money by buying in bulk and paying cash. Vendors like it because they like the volume

"That's the trouble with farmers, though," Rand said, "a lot of them are slow about paying. If you tell somebody you'll pay them cash - our volumes are really big - they like that.

"I sell corn and sometimes I don't get paid for a month. But if someone comes in here and says, 'Hey, I want 10,000 bushels of corn and I'll pay you cash for it' - that's nice "

Although the group has enjoyed savings on a number of items - including seed, chemicals, bailer twine, stretch film, tractor tires, engine oil, and paper towels - says extension agent and group participant George Wilcox, it considers other things before making a purchase.

"The purpose isn't solely to negotiate price," he says.

"Basically, they're saying, 'If you bill one person rather than several, we offer you cash and guarantee payment, and we are buying a given volume - that we would like to receive the cash discounts, the volume discounts - those things.'"

With those buys, where they've earned the volume discount, the savings have been in the 25-percent range, with up to 50-percent off on a couple of articles they bought factory direct.

Each deal is individual. But they haven't always taken the lowest price; they've looked at quality, service - those things along with it.

"Their basic philosophy is, 'we'll total up the volume, we'll stipulate the conditions (one delivery point or several), you take a look at it and give us a bid, and we'll decide from there. It's not a process of pitting one supplier against another - just a straight-forward transaction," Wilcox said

Although most members of the group are dairy producers who joint-purchase dairy-related products, a few grain producers belong to the group, which helps the group also get more favorable deals on seed

To keep the purchases manageable, Rand says, individual members will take on projects according to what they want to buy.

"I run the meetings," he says. "I have things written down that I want to talk about. After I do that, somebody might say, 'Hey, how many of you guys are interested in buying 50 gallons of oil?'"

Whoever is interested, says Rand, can write his order on a sign-up sheet or fax it by a certain deadline

ARMPPA, Inc. Dairy Meeting June 8, 1999

Fellow Dairy Farmers:

No matter what your financial position or situation is, YOU deserve better pay prices. Our present prices are at 1979 levels, while our costs have risen dramatically. What is one to do?

The Capper Volstead Act of 1922 still gives farmers the legal right to set their own prices. Join the American Raw Milk Producers Pricing Association, Inc., a national agency dedicated to pricing milk at the farm gate at cost of production plus a reasonable profit. No longer must we accept prices set by government bureaucrats who know nothing about the realities of the farm.

a cash-up-front basis, the group recently purchased 150,000 gallons of fuel, and members were billed individually.

Usually, though, one person will collect ahead of time and write one check for the total purchase.

Another part of the group's success, agree Wilcox and Rand, is that it meets not only to buy products and supplies - but for social and educational purposes, too.

"We meet the first Wednesday of every month," explained Rand. "During the summer - in July, August, and September - we meet at a farm. We have a picnic or lunch. Sometimes guys in the group will supply everything, and sometimes everyone will kick in $5, and we'll cook hotdogs or hamburgers.

"We do other things, too," he added.

"We've had vets come in to talk to us, guys talk to us about crop insurance, and George has talked about dairy issues.

"Basically, during the winter we do most of our buying, then in summer the meetings are more educational. We just had a meeting last Wednesday, and we're going to try and work on buying feed for our cows.

"We're going to spend some time talking about that - talk about what it costs to feed the cows, what other people are paying. We'll probably put our feed out on bid, and are going to invite in some feed mills that are interested in working with the group and see what they've got to offer."

A few members of the group also plan to experiment with silage corn, says Rand, planting between five and 10 trial plots to see which are most efficient in overall terms of cost and nutrition.

Looking toward the future, Rand says, he believes the group will continue to benefit by shared information and purchasing projects.

"Our group will still be going," he said. "It's not going to come apart.

"It's funny, when we started this thing, there were a lot of younger guys. They were pretty excited about this, but we invited some older guys - in their '60s and older. They were pretty negative, but really changed their minds.

"Farmers are kind of set in their ways; they don't want to change - and that hasn't really been a problem for us. We've all changed."

Chester County Holstein Field Day

Mark your calendar for Thursday, July 15, 1999 for the annual Chester County Holstein Club Field Day - a great day to take your dairy family to a picnic. The hosts will be Sam and Marian Stoltzfus on Business Route 30, just east of Route 10. This year the focus will be on consumer products and dairy promotion. As in years past, the club will be giving away a Registered Holstein calf born in June to a youth in attendance between the ages of 6 and 16. Also, there will be the usual three judging classes with numerous prizes for the best judges in the men, women and youth categories. And of course, there will be great food at the bargain prices. Don't miss a day to compare notes and socialize with your fellow dairy farmers. Watch for more information.

Spend Time to Educate Your Suburban Neighbors

Recently, I had the opportunity to take a couple of days off from my extension job to help plant soybeans on my family's dairy farm. As I made my way around the field, I noticed 4-wheeler tracks in an adjacent hay field. Upon closer inspection, I observed that the tracks came out of the hay field and cut straight through the strip I was planting. This particular area is susceptible to soil erosion, and the tract imprints made a perfect place for a gully to start.

At first, I was very upset with these individuals. What right did they have driving through our fields? Didn't they realize how difficult it is for farmers to produce crops without having to deal with vandalism?

As I made a few more rounds, I began to realize that these people simply may not have known any better. To many people who move from the city to the country, grass hay fields may appear to be "natural wild meadows" where deer and other wildlife graze freely. Farms are often figured to be un-monitored public parks with free access to anyone in the community.

As Southeastern Pennsylvania becomes more suburbanized, these problems and more will increase. Unfortunately, the only way these individuals are going to understand the consequences of their actions is if we spend some time to explain our views and practices to them. The following are some tips from fellow agricultural producers on how to establish good relations with your neighbors.

...Go directly to your neighbors if there's a problem, not through third parties.

...Approach your neighbors in a friendly, positive way - don't be accusing.

...Help neighbors realize that I'm not here to anger you, I'm here to make a living."

...Let people know what you're doing on the farm. Invite them into the farm.

...Explain the need for some agricultural practices. Help them understand that some noises and smells that are not to their liking are necessary.

...Be reasonable with your neighbors. Be as diplomatic as possible.

These are just a few ideas from farmers across Pennsylvania on how to communicate and establish a relationship with your neighbors. For more tips like these, contact your local Extension office and ask for Good Neighbor Relations - Advice and Tips from Farmers. Also available is a publication entitled Understanding Your Community's Agriculture. This is an excellent booklet which can be given to suburban neighbors explaining normal agricultural practices.

These tips may not work for every situation. However, once communication lines are established and suburban neighbors are educated on common agricultural practices, they may be more likely to work with you to achieve a common goal.

Agriculture Department Presents $50,000 Matching Grant To PennAg Industries

HARRISBURG (Dauphin Co.) — The Pennsylvania Department of Agriculture has awarded a $50,000 grant to PennAg Industries, Ephrata, to support educational efforts under the Pennsylvania Agricultural Product Promotion Matching Grant Program.

"The Department of Agriculture's matching grant program was created to generate greater awareness of Pennsylvania's diverse agricultural commodities," said Agriculture Secretary Samuel E. Hayes, Jr. "Through this grant, PennAg Industries has demonstrated its commitment to promote Pennsylvania's egg and poultry industries."

The Poultry Council of PennAg Industries used the grant to match producer and private industry funding for a television advertising campaign to promote the Pennsylvania Egg Quality Assurance Program (PEQAP), a voluntary industry program that assures the commitment of producers to provide consumers with the highest quality eggs.

"Together, under PEQAP, the Agriculture Secretary Samuel Hayes, right, presents matching grant check to Jim Adams, chairman of the PennAg Poultry Committee.

Department of Agriculture and Pennsylvania's egg and poultry industry have worked to make Pennsylvania the first state in the nation to institute management practices that minimize Salmonella enteritidis (SE) contamination of chicken (shell) eggs," said Hayes.

The Pennsylvania Agricultural Product Promotion Matching Grant Program is administered by the Department of Agriculture's Bureau of Market Development.

Pennsylvania State Grange Praises Dairy Farmers

HARRISBURG (Dauphin Co.) — The Pennsylvania State Grange is proud to recognize the accomplishments of dairy farmers as the organization continues to work to increase producer profitability.

"With June being recognized as national and state dairy month, the Pennsylvania Grange congratulates dairy farmers and their families for providing nutritious foods while pumping over $1.5 billion into the state's economy," William Steel, Pennsylvania State Grange President, said. "The Pennsylvania State Grange reaffirms its commitment to be a voice for the dairy industry in legislative affairs."

As an advocate for rural Pennsylvania, the Grange is a leading force in agricultural and rural issues. The Grange, with over 30,000 members in 66 counties, is a rural, agricultural and community service organization dedicated to improving the lives of Pennsylvanians through legislative action, offering member services and participating in community affairs.

At the state level, the Grange actively works to ensure that dairy farmers receive the best price for their product.

Over the past several years, the Grange testified at numerous hearings to successfully convince the Pennsylvania Milk Marketing Board to set the over-order premium at a price that will make dairy operations across the state more profitable.

"Dairy farming is an occupation that is vital to the structure and very survival of the family farm," Steel said. "Working to preserve it is a paramount issue for a family-based organization like the Grange."

cessfully helped raise the over-order premium from 50 to 80 cents, and in September 1997 worked to raise it from 80 cents to $1.20. The additional 40-cent increase, which expired April 30, 1998, was granted temporarily after an emergency hearing held at the request of the Grange due to the Drought of 1997.

"Dairy farmers face numerous uncertainties and that premium at least adds some financial stability to a very volatile industry," Steel said. "Let's face it, a profitable farm is a key to the economic well being of rural America. We will work to ensure that we maintain the financial health of our rural areas."

The Pennsylvania State Grange urges all citizens to help farmers celebrate dairy month by enjoying their favorite dairy product(s) - whether it be a refreshing, tall glass of milk, cheese on a sandwich or a delicious bowl of ice cream on a hot summer day.

At 210 degrees, hay is certain to ignite. Even with these safety precautions, fires may start and barns burn to the ground. Do not

Did You Know:

- Dairy is the largest industry in Pennsylvania's agriculture industry, which is the largest contributor of wealth to the Pennsylvania economy.
- Pennsylvania ranks fourth in milk production, producing 6.9 percent of the nation's milk.
- Total milk produced in the state in previous years amounted to 10.74 billion pounds for 1997, which was 83 million pounds more than 1996.

• There were 10,200 commercial dairy farms in Pennsylvania in 1997, with 639,000 milk cows in the state.

• Each dairy cow in Pennsylvania produced an average of 16,511 pounds in 1997.

• 10,280 million pounds of milk were sold to plants and dealers and 26 million pounds were sold directly to consumers, a total of 10,545 million pounds of milk marketed.

• The milk from every 20 cows creates one full-time job. More than 17,000 people are employed on Pennsylvania dairy farm. Another 12,000 have jobs in processing, transporting, and selling milk. This does not even account for the jobs of those who make and sell the equipment and farm supplies. Just a 2-percent growth in the Pennsylvania dairy industry creates 570 new jobs.

Wooster Garden Festival Set July 16-17 At OARDC

WOOSTER, Ohio — Sun shining, flowers blooming, bees buzzing, and children laughing — these are the sights and sounds of the lazy days of summer.

They also are the sights and sounds of the 1999 Wooster Garden Festival where visitors can explore the links between themselves and nature. The event promises activities and entertainment the entire family will enjoy.

The festival will be July 16-17 at the Wooster campus of the Ohio Agricultural Research and Development Center, 1680 Madison Ave., Wooster.

world of plants. Discover ecological gardening with wildflowers in a natural setting. Aquatic plant demonstrations will teach site preparation, plant selection and pool construction. Get a taste of herbal history by learning uses for herbs. Watch as bakers use an outdoor bread oven to produce mouth-watering European Rye Breads. Take a stroll through the arboretum on one of several garden walks featuring birds, butterflies, perennials, conifers and insects. Children will delight at the garden railway, continuously chugging throughout the two-day event.

Ken Cochran, Secret Arboretum curator, said the Wooster Garden Festival will provide an opportunity for people to solve their plant dilemmas, discover new ideas and solutions, and strengthen connections with the outdoors. "The festival will benefit everyone," Cochran said, "from inquisitive youngsters to experienced gardeners."

Festival hours are 10 a.m. to 7 p.m. Admission is free and open to the public. Refreshments will be sold at several locations on both campuses.

OARDC is part of Ohio State's College of Food, Agricultural and Environmental Sciences.

Make it Milk

The festival will showcase two rare trees, and celebrate the rediscovery of the Dawn Redwood and the 300th anniversary of John Bartram's discovery of the Franklin Tree. A bus will carry festival-goers to tree sites in the arboretum and to the College of Wooster campus where they will walk to several tree sites in and around Wooster.

Franklinia alabamaha, or Franklin Tree, is a distinctive small tree marked by the unusual quality of its brilliant autumn foliage — multicolored leaves with white flowers. The snow-white petals and golden yellow stamens of the flowers are a striking contrast against bright reddish-orange autumn leaves. The Franklin Tree is a North American native dating to the late 18th century when it was discovered by botanist John Bartram along the banks of Georgia's Altamaha River. Bartram named the tree after his friend, Benjamin Franklin. Bartram and his son William saved this species from total extinction. It hasn't been seen in its natural setting along the banks of the Altamaha River since the early 1800s.

Metasequoia glyptostroboides, or Dawn Redwood, was known only on the basis of fossil material until 1941, when the species was found growing in China. The species has deciduous needle-like leaves and is bare of foliage in winter, giving it a unique appearance. The fast-growing conifer is pyramidal, with a strongly tapered central leader.

In addition to the celebration of trees, visitors will see lots of other plants, flowers and shrubs. The Biolab for Children will give the young and young-at-heart a chance to explore the scientific

According to Kirby, Happy has become a diamond. "We have been told by several embryo marketing firms that Happy's sire lineup of Winken x Bell & Boss x Converse is probably the only one like it in the world.

Now, her Bellwood daughter has taken over as the most heavily contracted cow in the herd.

Representing an eighth generation Very Good or Excellent, she is a fifth generation bull mother. She carried more than $100,000 in embryo and bull contracts as a 2-year-old.

The Haley cow family is noted for their high milk components, and this past year she also became the first 40,000-pound lactation cow at Lynncrest.

Kirby said that while they have diversity in breeding goals, such as continuing their work with red & white Holsteins, breeding for type, as well as index, they are perhaps most satisfied with their Haley-Happy-Halfpint lineage.

The Horsts married and began farming in 1981 with Kirby's 25 Holsteins and Sheryl's two. They purchased 11 from Kirby's father during a dispersal, and rented the farm.

Since then they have added tunnel ventilation, a high moisture corn silo, a TMR mixer, calf barn, lane improvements, fencing, signs, etc.

They said they believe that the first impression is the lasting impression and they want every visitor to their facility to get a good impression — that these are people who care for their animals and understand quality production, be it Holsteins or milk.

"Milk quality is very important to us," Kirby said. "We ship our milk to Wengert's Dairy, which is the highest rated dairy in the state of Pennsylvania for milk quality.

"They pay a 30-cent premium for quality milk, so it is imperative for us to pay attention to all the little details," he said.

They pre- and post-dip, use individual towels, keep tie stalls cleaned, sweep the tiled manager and feed TMR twice per day, use kiln-dried wood shavings on the beds, clip flank and udder hair, periodically brush cows and wash tails, and change the milking machine inflations (the rubber-type liners of the vacuum milkers) every 60 days, and test for somatic cell count (SCC).

Their SCC has been running between 150,000 to 180,000. Their goal is to average below 130,000.

They vaccinate a full program under supervision, have an embryo-transfer veterinarian on the farm three- to four-times per month, trim feet regularly (several times per year), and use consultants and specialists when needed.

While they have made some fortunate purchases and have marketed well, as well as bred their own cattle well, they also have developed a rule-of-thumb for using flushing on the farm.

The consider the cost of flushing and don't do it unless they know they have a contract to fill.

"We make it a rule on our farm never to flush an animal unless they have a bull or embryo contract," Kirby said.

"We have produced over 550 fertilized embryos over the past five years and have never broken that rule. It's a good rule to keep us financially sound."

The Horsts also consider themselves fortunate to be located in a strong dairy and Holstein area.

As with certain other areas in the state, region and nation, in addition to having rich fertile limestone soils, with normally dependable rainfall and soil moisture, that stretch of the southern Lebanon Valley that lies between Newmanstown and Schaefferstown has had a long history of well-respected dairy cattle breeders and producers.

The valley dairy community is very strong and close-knit.

People depend upon each other for friendship, entertainment, and business relationships.

For the Horsts, they have close friends in the dairying business who have different approaches to farming and different interests, and that doesn't matter.

Ultimately, Kirby said, "The great thing about the dairy industry is that there are many different niches."

1985 Pedal Powered Milker Provides Wonderful Item For June Dairy Month Issue

Coaxing an animal to give up her milk has always been a laborious job. The Mehring Milker, patented in 1895 was an early beginning to mechanize the process. Dr. Jerome K. Pasto, retired curator and associate dean emeritus of the College of Agriculture at Penn State, shows how the machine was pedal-powered. The teat cups were made of solid Bakelite, and a pump to draw the milk created a vacuum. This kind of milker was used for ten to twenty years until improved machines were invented. The Mehring Milker shown here is complete in every detail, and is a rare museum piece. The photo was supplied by the Pasto Agricultural Museum, Penn State University.

Pa. Holstein Association Announces Judging Schools

STATE COLLEGE (Centre Co.) — The Pennsylvania Holstein Association has announced the schedules for the 1999 round of junior judging schools.

Every year, the PHA serves as host sponsor for two junior judging schools — one located in the eastern part of the state, the other in the west.

This year, both schools are to be held east of the Susquehanna River.

The deadline for registering for either school is June 21.

The Eastern School is set to be held June 28-29 in Adams County with the county Holstein Club serving as host. The specific farms and herds to be visited were not announced as of this week, but the teacher is to be Bonnie Remsburg, from Middletown, Maryland.

The Western School is set to be held June 30-July 1 in Westmoreland County, with that county's Holstein Club also serving as host organization.

The teacher is to be Alisa Fava of Scenery Hill.

The schools are open to all youth interested in learning about dairy cattle judging, regardless of personal dairy cattle breed affinity.

The PHA schools attempt to cover the basics of animal evaluation and reason-giving.

Individuals who attend have the opportunity to learn terminology, animal and class breakdowns, and how to effectively give reasons.

The cost of the school is $25 for those staying overnight. The cost includes the school, a hotel room and an evening meal.

For commuters, the fee is $15, covering the school and an evening meal.

Again this year, a second member of the same family who attends will receive $5 off the registration fee.

For more information, contact the PHA by writing to Pennsylvania Holstein Association, 839 Benner Pike, State College, PA 16801;

Pennfield Corporation Breaks Ground For Major Mill Expansion

SOUTH MONTROSE — Ground was broken in this small Northern Pennsylvania community on April 21 for a major expansion of Lancaster, PA - based Pennfield Corporation's livestock feed manufacturing plant.

According to Pennfield President and Chief Executive Officer Mike Horn the facility will be built on the site of an existing mill owned by the company. Horn said the new South Montrose Feed Mill will "cost $6 million to construct and will be one of the most technologically-advanced and most environmentally-friendly mills in North America."

"Pennfield prides itself in being a good corporate neighbor," Horn told the local government officials, citizens and members of the media gathered at the ground-breaking, adding, "It is our desire to become an asset to the South Montrose area and to the areas of Northern Pennsylvania and New York which this mill will serve."

Horn, who is the grandson of one of the founders of Pennfield Corporation, said that sales from the South Montrose Mill, which are projected to be $5 million in 1999, should increase to $20 million per year in the future as Pennfield plans to become "The dominant supplier of dairy feeds to farmers in the mill's Pennsylvania and New York service areas."

"Pennfield is in the forefront of producing nutritional livestock feeds to help farmers maximize their income through greater milk production," Horn said. "By keeping our dairy farmers profitable we are assuring the American Consumer the highest quality food source at the most affordable cost in the world today."

Construction of the South Montrose Mill expansion project should be completed by December 1999, Horn told those attending, adding that employment at the facility should double from 16 to 32 persons over the next several years.

Pennfield also operates two feed mills in Lancaster County, at Hempfield and Mt. Joy and one in Blair County, at Martinsburg, which serves the western part of Pennsylvania and neighboring states. The Corporation owns a broiler breeder operation in North Carolina and has recently entered into several partnerships in Virginia to introduce Pennfield Feeds to farmers in that state.

Founded in 1971 by the merger of two local feed companies, D.E. Horn & Company and Miller & Bushong, Pennfield Corporation has grown from a small local company to a major regional agri-business concern with over 700 employees. In addition to Pennfield Feeds, which manufactures dairy, horse, and specialty feeds, the Corporation also produces and markets chicken products under the Pennfield Farms and Amish Select labels, and distributes meats and other food products to grocery stores, hotels and restaurants through its Ritter/Goodhart food service subsidiaries.

Farm Bureau Foundation Donates $5,000 To RULE

CAMP HILL (Cumberland Co.) — The Pennsylvania Friends of Agriculture Foundation has made a $5,000 contribution to the Pennsylvania Rural Leadership Program (RULE).

A portion of the funds will be used to encourage more participation by farmers in RULE's two-year program for developing community leaders.

The Pennsylvania Friends of Agriculture Foundation is a charitable foundation established by Pennsylvania Farm Bureau to support educational scientific and other charitable organizations which are important to the future well being of agriculture.

Farm Bureau is a non-governmental, volunteer organization which represents over 27,000 farm and rural families in Pennsylvania.

Marlin Miller, executive director of the Pennsylvania Friends of Agriculture Foundation, announced the contribution to RULE during a recent check presentation ceremony at Pennsylvania Farm Bureau's office in Camp Hill. Accepting the check on behalf of RULE was Ted Alter, association vice president for outreach at The Pennsylvania State University.

RULE focuses on developing skills in communication, visualization, personal leadership and addressing community issues. Participants are selected to reflect diverse backgrounds, interests and goals, as well as a demonstrated commitment to community involvement and to solving public issues. Applicants are evaluated for their experience, needs and potential as they vie for one of the 45 positions in RULE's upcoming two-year class.

For more information about RULE or an application for the next class, contact RULE, The Pennsylvania State University, 6 Armsby Building, University Park, 16802, telephone (814) 863-4679.

We live on a large dairy farm and enjoy visitors. On July 10-11, we host an open house and farm show. We also have school groups visit.

My husband Paul and I farm with our son David. Since David's wife is a small animal vet, their 10-month-old daughter Lela Rose spends much of her time on the farm.

This recipe was given to me by our aunt, who always brought this dessert to family gatherings.

My name is Sylvia Harris Murphy and I live on a farm in Ulster with my husband Malcolm. We have an active dairy farm and employ one girl besides ourselves. I am a high school home economics teacher, 4-H leader, and a nursery coordinator for our church.

We have three daughters, Teresa, a speech teacher in Edinboro Elementary; Annette, a social worker in New Jersey, and Eileen, a college student. You may remember Eileen who was the Pennsylvania Alternate Dairy Princess for 1998-1999.

I enjoy cooking, counted cross-stitch, and working in the flower beds. Saturday is a great day when "Lancaster Farming" arrives.

EASY MACARONI DISH

- 3 tablespoons butter
- 2½ cups uncooked elbow macaroni
- 1 teaspoon salt
- ¼ teaspoon pepper
- ½ pound Velveeta cheese
- 1 quart milk

Melt butter in 1½-quart baking dish. Pour macaroni into melted butter, stir until coated.

Slice cheese, add salt, pepper, cheese, and cold milk. Bake uncovered at 325 degrees for 1½ hours. Do not stir while baking.

This dish is quick and easy to prepare and also very tasty. I enjoy cooking and baking for my husband Lee and our 1½-year-old son, Shane. They're big eaters.

We live on a dairy farm and my husband also does some custom round baling. I enjoy gardening and sewing, and do a lot of home canning each summer.

COCONUT CUSTARD

- 4 eggs
- 1 cup sugar
- 3½ cups hot milk
- 2 cups moist coconut
- ½ teaspoon salt
- 1 teaspoon vanilla

Beat eggs and sugar until light in color. Add other ingredients. Bake at 450 degrees for 10 minutes. Reduce temperature to 325 degrees. Bake about 30 minutes more or until silver knife comes out dry. Yields two 8-inch pies.

We live on Evergreen Hill. Karl is involved with Evergreen Kabinetry. We raised broilers for Pennfield in our two chicken houses. I, jack of all trades, prefer homemaking. I especially enjoy making bread from scratch—no mixes.

We love our nine grandkids and number 10 is on the way, especially when the whole Evergreen gang (22 plus) gets together every Sunday evening for a meal. We have good food made with our favorite recipes, some from Lancaster Farming. I always look forward to reading and clipping recipes from section B.

We thank and praise the Lord for all He has done for us!

On Being a Farm Wife (and other hazards) Joyce Bupp

Hey, you, back there.
A little more gently, if you don't mind.
Sheesh! Just because she's irritated, she doesn't have to take it out on me. I didn't have anything to do with it.
Oh, hi there. Sorry about the mootering under my breath. I was just mooing to myself. Yeah, mooing, I'm a cow, in case you didn't notice.
Just kidding. How could anyone not notice these black and white spots? They're on everything these days. Even cows.

Anyway, as I was mooing, she was getting a little carried away there, getting me ready to milk. She gets carried away and doesn't just dip and soak and wipe me dry. She SCRUBS. And TUGS. HEY, TAKE IT EASY.
I can't help it if I like to lounge around in that mud puddle way down in the far, shady corner. We all like to hang out there. It's shady. And cool. Probably that's why it's become a puddle. But, I'm not sure it's all mud.

It's never hard to tell what mooooooood she's in during milking. If the weather is pleasant and the crops growing, and none of us sick or escaped or having calving problems, she'll probably hum along with the country music station.
And was me real gently. Unless I've been hanging out in that puddle, which I must admit, does take some extra work. Okay. So I give in to peer pressure to hang out where I'm not supposed to be. And I pay at teat-washing time.
Or, if those little boys who visit a lot now happen to come in the barn while we're milking, she actually ignores us for a little while and pays all her attention on them. That actually makes me a little jealous. But it sure keeps her in a good mood.
Boy, but lately. That's another story.
I've listened to the grumbling. She probably thinks I can't understand what she's mooootering about under her breath, but I have REALLY good ears. When your ears are big, like my nice, soft, hairy cow ones, they catch a lot more of what's going on than those little naked ears you people have. Plus, I can turn and angle my ears for better reception. Let's see you do that.

Anyway, as I was mooosing, she's been real irritable Grumbling to The Farmer while they take care of us about some proposal from some government dude to lower the price paid for my milk. Permanently. Like almost a dollar for every hundred pounds, I heard her growling.
Seems these government types are redoing the whole system for pricing my milk. And especially lowering the price right here in this part of the country, because there are so many of us cows around here. But they didn't consider how many of you people are also around this part of the country who expect to have my fresh milk handy in the stores just any time you think you need it.
Hey, you missed a spot back there on that right rear teat. PAY ATTENTION.

Boy, she must really be distracted now. I've heard her rumbling about a bunch of farmers writing letters and making phone calls about this change. They'd better not get so distracted they forget about US Doggone, I wish she'd change how she's getting ready to milk me today. HEY, A LITTLE LESS CLEANING VIGOR BACK THERE.
Maybe I should have stayed out of that puddle.
There, take that swap with my tail. That should get her attention. As soon as she retrieves her safety glasses from that manure splat out in the walkway.
No, that won't improve her mooooooood. She's too irritated after figuring up about how much less money my milk is going to earn them to pay the feed bills. And the taxes. And all that other stuff she writes those endless checks for. But it sure made ME feel better.
Wish she'd remember that this is Dairy Month. And go have some strawberries and ice cream.
That's one thing guaranteed to put her in a better mooooooood

CREAMY BAKED CHEESECAKE

1 1/4 cup graham cracker crumbs
1/4 cup sugar
1/2 cup butter (melted)
2 8-ounce packages of cream cheese, softened
14 ounces sweetened condensed milk
3 eggs
1/4 cup real lemon juice concentrate
8 ounces sour cream
21 ounces cherry pie filling
Preheat oven to 300 degrees. Combine crumbs, sugar, and butter. Press on bottom of 9-inch pie pan.

In mixer bowl, beat cream cheese until fluffy. Gradually beat in sweetened condensed milk until smooth. Add eggs and lemon; mix well.

Pour into prepared pan. Bake 50-55 minutes or until center is set. Top with sour cream. Bake 5 minutes longer. Cool. Chill. top with pie filling.

My name is Robin Thompson. My husband, John, and our three children, Jimmy, 13; Mike, 9; and Jackie, 2, live in Pulaski, Lawrence County.

Our farm is 120 acres and we rent 80 acres from my husband's grandparents. This farm has been in the Thompson family for 50 years. We are the third generation.

We milk 40 registered Holsteins and have a 120-sow farrow-to-finish hog operation. The boys are involved in 4-H and they show pigs and rabbits. The boys are also very active in baseball. Jackie loves the farm and, for some reason, loves ducks!

I don't have a lot of time to cook or bake and, to be honest, Jimmy makes most of our suppers while I'm milking.

This dessert, creamy baked cheesecake, is a family favorite. It does take some time to make, but is well worth it. You can top the cheesecake with your favorite pie filling or even serve it plain. It's delicious!

BUTTERSCOTCH CREAM PIE

1 cup butterscotch-flavored morsels
1 3/4 ounce package instant vanilla pudding mix
1 cup sour cream
1 cup milk
9-inch graham cracker crust
1 cup heavy cream
1 tablespoon confectioners' sugar

Melt morsels over hot water and stir until smooth. Remove from heat.

In small bowl, combine pudding mix, sour cream, and milk. Beat well. Beat in melted morsels. Pour filling into pie crust. Chill at least one hour. Whip cream and confectioners' sugar until stiff peaks form. Spread over pie. Chill until serving time.

This is a fast, easy recipe to make when time is in short supply, which it usually is on our dairy farm. We have registered Jerseys. I always look forward to the recipes and the family information people send in for the June issues.

Cathy Anusesky

TURTLE PIE

1 cup semisweet chocolate chips, divided
1/4 cup chopped pecans
1 9-inch pastry shell, baked
16 ounces cream cheese, softened
1/4 cup caramel topping
1/4 cup confectioners' sugar
2 tablespoons whipping cream
Whipped cream and additional chocolate chips, caramel, and pecans may be used for garnish.

Spinkle 1/4 cup chocolate chips and pecans in a pastry shell. Pour caramel topping over chips and pecans. In a mixing bowl, beat cream cheese and sugar until smooth. In a saucepan over low heat, cook and stir remaining chips and cream until smooth. Gradually add to the cream cheese mixture; mix well. Carefully spread into pastry shell. Garnish as desired. Yield: 8 servings.

CREAMY GREEN BEAN CASSEROLE

1/4 pound bacon
2 tablespoons flour
1 teaspoon salt
1/4 teaspoon pepper
1-2 tablespoons minced onion
2 tablespoons butter
1/2 cup milk
1 1/2 cups sour cream
2 pints green beans
2 cups shredded cheese
1/2 cup bread crumbs

Cut bacon into small pieces and fry in non-stick skillet. Remove bacon and drain. Melt butter in skillet and blend in flour until smooth and bubbly. Stir in milk until slightly thickened. Remove from heat.

Add seasonings, onion, bacon, and sour cream. Stir well and add green beans. Pour into greased oblong 2-quart casserole and cover with 1 cup of the cheese. Mix the other cup of cheese with bread crumbs and cover the casserole again. Bake at 350 degrees for 25 minutes.

My husband and I live in Gettysburg and farm about 50 acres in Biglerville. He works at a tractor dealership and I am an occupational therapist. We have two sons. Robert is 2 1/2 and Cameron is 8 weeks old.

I enjoy cooking, crafts, and collecting cookbooks. We hope to eventually raise our children on a farm of our own.

OYSTER STEW

1 pint oysters
Dash salt and pepper
Sprinkle with Old Bay
1 stick butter
Heat mixture until oysters curl.

Then add

1 cup cream
Mix well. Add

1/2 can cream of celery soup

My husband David and I have been milking cows for 35 years. We have a daughter, two sons, two daughters-in-law, and an adorable 10-month-old granddaughter.

SAUSAGE AND CORN CHOWDER

1 pound spicy or hot sausage
1 medium onion
1 can cream corn
1 can kernel corn, drained
2 cans cream of chicken soup
2 soup cans milk or cream
1 1/2 cups shredded sharp cheddar

1 1/2 cups Swiss cheese, shredded
Brown sausage with onion and drain.

Pour cream corn, kernel corn, soups, and milk into large pot or crock pot. Blend in sausage and onion with cheddar cheese. Simmer for at least 45 minutes over low heat.

Serve hot with grated Swiss cheese sprinkled on top of each bowl.

This recipe is a real crowd pleaser and one of my family's favorites. The chowder satisfies a hungry farm family and gets great reviews from company. Nobody will ever guess how easy it is to make. You'll take a few bows when you serve this.

Our family owns a 120-cow dairy farm in Boones Mill, Va. The farm has been in the Boitnott family for 100 years. We have subscribed to Lancaster Farming for years. My husband loves the articles and the classified section. I adore the recipes and women's articles. Our week would not be complete without Lancaster Farming.

We have four members in our family: Dale, the hardworking farmer; myself, the resident homemaker and farm assistant; Joshua, our precocious 4-year-old; and Brittany, our independent and often dramatic year-old daughter.

BUTTERSCOTCH PUFFS OR 'CUSTARD'

Cream 1/4 cup brown sugar
4 tablespoons butter
1/4 teaspoon salt

Scald 1 1/4 cup milk

Beat 3 egg yolks and slowly stir into milk. Mix milk and sugar mixtures together. Add 1 teaspoon vanilla. Fold in 3 egg whites that have been beaten stiff. Bake at 325 degrees for 40-45 minutes. Pour custards into six glass custard cups and place in a 9-inch by 13-inch baking pan. Place 2 cups of water in bottom of pan.

This dessert is a favorite of our children. Our 7-year-old will often ask on the way home from church if I made custards for dinner! I only make them for Sunday dinner.

My husband, Kervin, and I live on a dairy farm with our five sons. He milks about 72 cows. I'm kept busy with all the normal household duties that keep a farm wife busy. In my free time I enjoy reading and sewing.

Get Ready For Food Preservation Season

Food preservation season is almost upon us. Some of you early birds may already have frozen rhubarb or asparagus. As you prepare for this preservation season there are a few things you should think about to improve your outcomes.

What Is Leftover From Last Year?

In the freezer:

- Check the types of food that are still remaining. Hopefully, you will have dated everything in the freezer to be able to tell when you froze the food. It should be your goal to use foods within the year you froze them. When food is in the freezer longer than a year the quality of the items will slowly deteriorate. Foods containing fat may develop off flavors as the fat becomes somewhat rancid. Vegetables, fruits, beef and poultry keep very well in a zero degree freezer for a year.

- Can you tell what's left over? Some foods in transparent wrapping are pretty easy to identify, others are not. "Mystery Boxes" that are unidentified as to contents and date are a waste of freezer space — can also be an adventure. I know of one person who added a tub of what she thought was turkey stock to a soup, only to discover it was the leftover Apricot Sours from New Year's Eve! If you have unidentified packages, take the pledge to do better this year!

- Why are the foods leftover?

Did you overestimate your family's like for a specific food? Maybe you will want to freeze less of that food this year and more of food that was used up first. Figure how many times a week and how many weeks in a year you want to serve this food when you decide how much to freeze.

For Canning:

- Check the canning shelves to see how much and what types of foods remain. These foods should also have been labeled. Canned goods should be used within the year of canning. Longer storage will cause the foods to lose color, change texture and lose some nutrients. Cool dark storage shelves keep food in better shape than shelves located in a brightly lighted warm places. If you have jams and jellies left over, give them away or eat jelly like crazy before you do new supplies.

From time to time, extension agents are asked about using home canned foods that are many years old. We recommend using them up within a year or two at the most. If you have food on your shelf that is five or more years old, start the new century by clearing off the old stock!

Check Your Equipment

For the freezer:

- Defrost before adding new food. Frost steals space in the freezer but more important, it insulates the food from the cold in the walls and freezer coils, making the freezer less efficient. If you have a frost free freezer tidy up and get rid of old food.

- Check the condition of the packages. If you have food packages that have holes or tears in the wrapping you will have freezer burn. Freezer burn dries out the food making it taste like stewed cardboard. Maybe you didn't use freezer weight foil or plastic bags so that when the frozen food slid around in the freezer, it was easily torn. Invest in the proper weight freezer wrapping to guard your larger investment in food and electricity. Do not reuse plastic bags in the freezer because they may have pin holes. Use them for general storage in the refrigerator or elsewhere. If the packages are filled with lots of ice crystals, that is usually an indication that the bag or box was too big for the amount of food in the bag and you didn't squeeze out as much air as possible. Try to do a better job of filling the package and excluding air this year.

- Check your freezer temperature with a thermometer. It should be at least 0°F or colder to freezer foods quickly and form tiny ice crystals.

For Canning:

- Check the condition of your pressure canner. Is the gasket still flexible or is it hard and stiff and cracked. Hunt down a replacement now before you need it. If you have a dial gauge canner, have the gauge tested for accuracy at your local extension office. Replacement gauges can be purchased where canning supplies are sold. Pressure canners with a weighted gauge do not need to be tested.

If you see a used canner for sale at a yard or garage sale or at auctions, realize that you can replace gaskets, gauges and weights. Do check on the condition of the metal. If the aluminum is badly pitted inside and at the sealing surface, pass it by.

- Check your supply of lids. Most recent lids have a date printed on the top. Try to use lids up within a year or two. The sealing compound on old lids may lose elasticity, causing seal failure. Using old lids is "penny-wise and pound-foolish." Not all brands of lids have dates, by the way, so mark them when you buy them. I do not think undated lids are a bargain at an auction because you have no idea how old they are.

Do not over plan to reuse lids. A fine point for those of you who are planning to enter your efforts in a fair: Judges tend to not award prizes to canned goods that have lids dated a couple of years earlier! This is 1999. As a judge I will accept 1998 lids but will not pick earlier lids.

- Get ready for Y2K by eliminating old unsafe methods of canning such as oven canning, open kettle canning and waterbath canning of vegetables and meat.

Contact your local Extension office for information or classes in how to do it safely. Just because you have never become ill from your improperly canned foods does not make them safe!

We have a large yard and garden, so there's plenty of outside summer work. I also keep busy with cooking, baking, sewing, and running after our active 1-year-old daughter, Emily Sue.

Put into jars and refrigerate. Does not require any cooking and will keep a long time. Be sure the horseradish is covered with vinegar solution.

A Father's Presence

Following is a Father's Quiz. Mothers can read it too and think about where the father of your child fits. After each question, a short fact from father research explains why the question was asked.

1. Effective dads teach primarily by role modeling. To be a role model, a dad has to first establish the values he wishes to pass on, and then interact with his child — not a little, but a lot. Are you "there" for your child?

Emotional expressions are among the most important qualities a father can model. Few men are comfortable showing emotions, but all children need to learn how to handle their emotions in a healthy way. And dad, your children — especially your sons — are going to learn largely by watching you.

2. Fathers form secure attachments with their children through active, physical, rough and tumble play. Do you and your child play together at least 2-3 times a week?

A father's parenting style tends to emphasize play more than caretaking, which can be frustrating to moms. The way a father plays affects everything from the management of emotions, to intelligence and academic achievement. According to research, "children who rough house with their fathers quickly learn that biting, kicking, and other forms of violence are not acceptable. They learn to "shut it down."

3. Absentee dads often claim that they make up for the time they've missed with their children by spending "quality time" with them. What is your definition of quality time?

Nothing can replace a father spending time with his children, and it's usually the everyday moments together that are most meaningful for children. Here is an example when fathers can spend special time with their children.

Bedtime. It's interesting that when children are asked to write about their fathers, many of them choose to say something about bedtime. As a father, you can have a profound affect on your child's state of mind in those final moments of the day. Children look to their father for strength, stability, and security as they drift off to sleep. So, look at bedtime as a great opportunity. It's a time when your child will be very receptive to you. Use the time to help your child gain a healthy perspective on the positive and negative experiences they had during the day. Help them sort out their feelings and set a positive tone for whatever tomorrow may bring.

4. The evidence supports the notion that fathers play an important role in preparing their children for life outside the comfort of the family. At times Dad's role will trigger conflict with Mom about rules, risk taking, consequences, performance expectation, and other parenting issues. When conflicts arise, do you automatically "give in," assuming that the child's mother knows best?

Your child's mother has expectations of you as a father. The only way to deal with her expectations is to bring them out in the open, discuss them, and make decisions together for the benefit of the children. You need to be able to tell her what you think your fathering duties are, and you need to listen to her ideas. If you verbalize your commitment as a father, that makes you accountable to follow through on those intentions.

5. Active fathers understand that the power of their role is linked to their ability to pull their child into their world. Do you initiate and welcome opportunities to be with your children or take them with you to work, on errands, or to join you in doing the things you enjoy?

Taking your child into your world requires patience. Patience is crucial because your child moves at a different pace and operates at a different size and mental ability than you. Children are going to slow you down. Expect jobs to take half again the normal time. Don't let inefficiency discourage you. Be patient and let them do it. Children desire the involvement of hands-on experience. Don't deny them the satisfaction of accomplishing a task.

What does fatherhood mean to you? Now is a great time to come up with your own personal fathering policy.

Third Graders Learn How To Care For The Earth

Third grade students in the Tulpehocken School District were treated to an adventure recently.

Caretaker All was the theme of the curriculum material.

Six stations provided exposure to Caretakers of Animals, Plants, Water, Community, Soil and Resources and allowed students to interact with high school students developing leadership skills through the FFA. The adventure was hosted by Mor-Dale Farm, near Frystown, Berks County, owned and operated by Ralph and Crystal Moyer.

John Ratchie, DVM with Willow Creek Animals Hospital and Moyer spoke to the children about health, nutrition, safety and diagnosis of small and large animals. Ratchie emphasized prevention by using vaccines for such diseases as rabies, feeding the appropriate diet, exercise, adequate rest and plenty of fresh water. His dog Farley provided a treat for those needing to love an animal.

Ralph emphasized the feed consumed by the dairy animals which inhabit Mor-Dale Farm. He especially discussed cotton seeds utilized in the diet of ruminant animals for protein. The cotton seed being the by-product of the milling industry which produces the cloth making most of the T-shirts that student wore.

Caretakers of Plants John Falter, Berks County Extension Agent, and Master Gardeners Norman Reifsnnyder, and Donald Klein shared their vegetable gardening expertise. Students planted an entire garden of potatoes, carrots, radishes, peas, beans, tomatoes, broccoli, cauliflower, and red beets.

What do plants need to grow was the question asked of the third grade participants. Their responses included sunshine for warmth, moisture provided by rain, and ground.

Students learned that tomatoes like warm weather, while peas prefer cooler temperatures. And when you consume an onion you are eating a bulb which is swelled-up leaves.

The farm pond provided a scenic spot for the Caretaker of Water Chip Karasin, Nolde Forest Environmental Education Center. "She asked the kids why things need water and what lives in water.

Students responded quickly on their note pads as they worked in groups. Bass fish, water bugs, tadpoles, frogs, birds and raccoons were found on students' lists. Everything needs water was resounded.

Students moved around the pond surveying it and gathering samples which they screened to separate its various life finds.

David Varone, Berks County Recycling Coordinator, and Lori Yalk, Conestoga Land Fill, rewarded kids for their knowledge as Caretaker's of Resources. Varone utilized a collection of plastic, glass, aluminum, metal, etc. to discuss material which can be recycled and the products produced such as plastic mats placed under play ground equipment.

Yalk utilized a landfill sandwich model to emphasize the detail taken when a landfill is constructed to prevent leachate from polluting the environment. She discussed the types of materials placed in a landfill. She also pointed out that materials that should be composted do not belong in landfills.

Randy McCormick, NRCS Caretaker of Soils, compared the naming of a soil in Pennsylvania to other state symbols. Students provided the following when questioned by McCormick; the state bird - Ruffed Grouse, and state Plant - Mt. Laurel.

"Our state soil is called the Hazeltown," McCormick said. This was done to celebrate 100 years of mapping soils in Pennsylvania.

Utilizing materials provided by the Berks County Conservation District students created a soil profile consisting of an A horizon, B horizon and C horizon. And then had the chance to ponder the questions, how long does it take to make an inch of top soil? Why are light soils cooler than dark soils?

A special treat at the Caretaker of Communities station was the Beef Council's Patty Melt product. Detective Cool utilized Patty melt and a food safety theme to crack his case. The 4 C's of food safety were portrayed; keep it cool, clean, covered and avoid cross contamination.

Pennsylvania Beef Council representative Tammy Weaver served as the Caretaker of the Community.

Special treats in the day's agenda were a milking demonstration in the parlor, a calf housing tour, and lunch grilled by the elementary school principals and advisory council members. Sire Power, through district manager Eldon Ford, provided ice cream for the participants prior to boarding the return buses sponsored by the local PTOs.

The day provides a great opportunity for high school students to interact with elementary school students.

Serving as tour guides were Joshua Folk, Garritt Randazzo, Kelly Dietrich, Jennifer Manbeck, Kelly Peifer, Jennifer Oxenreider, Michelle McMichael, Cindy Bray, Andrea Graeff, Lora Seiverling, Jill Vail, and Melanie Bicksler. Students assisting as caretaker assistants included Jessica Phillips, Melanie Kerschner, Jennifer Johnson, Clinton Baker, Todd Rebman, Matthew Forry, Holly Moyer and Elizabeth Loump.

Missy Folk and Joshua Krill acted as public relations assistants. FFA President Oralyn Folk was disguised as Patty Melt.

Third grade students and teachers from the Bethel and Penn Bernville schools participated in the event

Chip and the children looking for larvae in the pan of their discoveries from the pond.

Randy McCormick oversees students as they construct soil profiles.

Donald Klein gives third graders potato eyes to plant in the garden.

Ida's Notebook

Ida Risser

After a dry spell, we've just had some much needed showers.

Now I am hoping that the seeds that I put in the garden will finally sprout. Most of my flowers are grown from seed and so they bloom later in the summer. June is the month of roses and some of ours did not make it through the winter. However, my old-fashioned double pink rose looks fine.

When I was planting peanuts in our garden, I saw a blue bird but it was not a bluebird but rather an Indigo Bunting. It is entirely blue and does not have a chestnut brown breast as bluebirds do. Occasionally, we see American Goldfinch in our nearby meadow. My husband made a birdbath out of recycled material and the birds really use it so that we must constantly refill it.

Recently we had the privilege of touring the Reist Seed Company in Mt. Joy. This company has been in the Reist family for three generations. At the present time it has evolved into a major producer of popcorn. They contract 2,000 acres in Ohio and haul it to Lancaster County in a 26-ton dump truck. It goes through many screenings to removed cracked grains, tiny stones, and other dirt. Finally it is bagged in 2,100-pound white plastic bags to be trucked to a processor. The computerized equipment is quite expensive.

The grandchildren helped to make hills and plant seeds of cantaloupe, pumpkins and squash. Of course, they look forward to the candy that I keep in the glove compartment of my car for them. Why, they've even helped themselves to some when I didn't even know it

BAKED MACARONI AND CHEESE

2 cups dry elbow macaroni, cooked in boiling water
2 tablespoons butter
2 tablespoons grated onion
Salt and pepper to taste
2 cups milk
12-ounces grated sharp cheddar cheese

Double or triple for a crowd. Any combination of pasta and cheese is the favorite supper for our daughters.

We have a hay, grain, and dry bean operation in the Finger Lakes Region of New York state.

My husband John and I have two daughters; Linnell is 12, and Serita is 9.

I volunteer at their school two mornings a week, teaching writing skills, and when I'm not helping John, I make quilts to order and do hand quilting for other patchworkers.

Bake at 375 degrees for 45-50 minutes.

This recipe was given to me by a friend and I made it for the first time Dec. 23, 1997. That evening I went into labor and had my first child on Christmas Eve. I had a beautiful little girl, Candace Monroe Doty, and she loves her daddy's farm. We have a small farm in Warwick, N.Y., with about 73 cows, including heifers.

Fifth Generation Wakefields Farm At Friends Cove

LINDA WILLIAMS
Bradford Co. Correspondent
BEDFORD (Bedford Co.) — For five generations the Wakefield family has been farming in Friends Cove, near Bedford.

"Big difference is," said Tom Wakefield, now in partnership with his brother Jim, "we farm more land, have more cows, and work more hours for percentage-wise less profit than our great grandfather."

Tom and Jim do basically all of the work on their 400 acres of scenic land.

They milk at least 110 head of Holstein with the help of a neighbor. Jim's son Scott, 18, also helps on the farm.

With replacements and young stock, they have about 200 Holsteins on the farm at any one time.

Great grandfather never dreamed of the modern equipment now used on the old homeplace. There is a computerized system which can help the Wakefields keep track of feeding, breeding and milk production.

Forage, roughage, and hay are all grown on the farm, along with shelled corn.

"We try to put out enough acres to allow a buffer for a drought year," Tom said. "If we get lucky and there is no drought, we sell the extra, but this always allows us a buffer for a disaster year."

While Tom favors working with the cows; Jim enjoys the equipment and crop production.

"However, if one of us isn't here, the other picks up the slack," Tom explained.

Tom's wife, Cathy, is a home economics teacher at Tussey

Mountain High School. They have two sons, J.T., 8, and Thad, 10.

Jim is married to Beverly, a teacher at Bedford Elementary School. In addition to their son Scott, they have a daughter, Betsy, 16.

"We don't know at this time if any of the children are going to want to take over the farm," Tom said. "Scott is still undecided about what he wants to do. However, he does plan to attend Penn State University to major in agriculture and may decide to come home when he is finished. Betsy is not interested, and my boys are still a little young for such a big decision."

He said that the future of dairy farming is uncertain.

"We think we are good managers," Tom said, "and that is what it takes to make a go of farming these days. Our milk production last year was 21,500 (pounds of milk) per cow."

"We are sure the trend towards a larger farm will not stop, but we hope and think there will always be room for all sizes of dairy producers," Tom said.

"Those who are good managers will survive," he continued. "Large farms do have the advantage of being able to buy in bulk, which helps keep costs down."

"The days of a small farm supporting a family are gone."

Tom said he and Jim joke about their wives working to support their farming "hobby."

"However, at times we wonder if it really is a joke," Tom said.

"Twenty years ago, when we made an improvement, it could be paid off in a short amount of time. That is no longer true. Costs continue to escalate, and part of this is because there are fewer and fewer farms. The less demand there is for equipment, the more it will cost.

"It's really kind of scary, when you think that 2 percent of the population is growing all of the food for the entire population of the United States," he said.

The Wakefields ship their milk to Land O' Lakes, and are paid on butterfat and total solids-not-fat components. Most federal milk marketing orders are going in that direction, according to Tom.

Like many others, the Wakefields get tired of hearing all the "fat-free" propaganda. "We sincerely believe that you should eat what you want, just not so much of it."

Unlike the hog and chicken markets, the Wakefields do not foresee a wave of large corporations owning dairy farms. "It is too labor intensive for corporations to be interested. They would have to hire too many people."

Working together, Tom and Jim said they hope to remain farming until another generation of Wakefields takes over the home place.

This is one of my favorite desserts. I like the fact that I can make it ahead and it's a very rich dessert so company things that I've spent a lot of time and money preparing this dish.

I live in Wales, Maine. We farm and have registered Holsteins for milking. I work as a registered nurse. I have four children, three no longer at home. We moved from Pennsylvania to Maine 18 years ago in a church planting effort. We participate in a bed and breakfast, and we love company.

We enjoy "Lancaster Farming," especially the mailbox markets and recipe sections.

This picture of the John Keith family was taken at John's sister Mary Ann's wedding. Her colors were black and white, very fitting for a wedding held on a Holstein dairy farm.

YUMMY POTATOES

2 pound package frozen hash brown potatoes
 8-ounces cheddar cheese, cubed
 1 can cream of chicken soup
 1 medium onion, chopped, sauteed in 2 teaspoons butter
 8-ounces sour cream
 1/2 teaspoon salt
 Dash pepper

Mix together all ingredients except for potatoes. Put potatoes in large, buttered baking dish. Pour mixture over potatoes and sprinkle with topping.

Topping: Mix 2 cups crushed corn-flakes and 1/2 stick melted butter.

Bake at 350 degrees for 45 minutes. Serves 25. Pan size 9x13-inches.

The recipe is one that has become a tradition at our holiday buffets. My 10 nieces and nephews call it "Yummy Potatoes."

We are the John Keith family from Entriken, which is on the edge of Lake Raystown in Huntingdon County. My husband John and his dad Harry operate the dairy farm, which has been in the family since before the Civil War.

Jodi, 13; Andy, 11; Stacie, 10; are all active in school, Grange, church, and 4-H activities. They care for the calves everyday and do whatever else they can do to help their dad. I work full time as a Hospice home care nurse, which keeps me very busy off the farm.

BEEF AND TATER SQUARES

1 1/2 pounds hamburger
 1 cup bread crumbs
 1 egg (beaten)
 1/2 cup onion (chopped)
 1/2 cup ketchup
 2 tablespoons barbecue sauce
 1 teaspoon salt
 1/2 teaspoon pepper
 1 quart hot mashed potatoes
 1/2 teaspoon onion salt
 3 ounces cream cheese
 1/4 cup sour cream
 Hot milk

Combine beef, crumbs, egg, onion, ketchup, and barbecue sauce, salt and pepper. Pat into a 9-inch by 13-inch pan and bake at 350 degrees for 45-60 minutes or until pinkness is gone. Remove from oven and drain grease. Mash potatoes and add cream cheese, sour cream, salt and pepper and hot milk as desired. Bake 20 minutes more.

This is a casserole that our family loves and, since we have our own meat in the freezer and raise our own potatoes, it's a very inexpensive casserole to prepare.

We live on a dairy farm and milk 64 cows. Our milk gets shipped to Clover Farms Dairy.

My husband Richard and I have one son and four daughters: Daryl, 28; Sharon, 26; Karen, 22; Jolene, 17; and Sherita, 14. Daryl and Sharon are married and we have two adorable grandchildren: Daryl Lamar, 3, and Mary Ellen, 5.

Life on the farm is very busy and very rewarding.

 2 eggs
 2 teaspoons vanilla
 4 cups flour
 1 teaspoon baking soda
 12-ounce bag chocolate chips.
 Cream butter. Add sugar. Beat. Add ricotta cheese, eggs, and vanilla. Add the dry ingredients. Fold in chocolate chips. Drop on a cookie sheet. Bake at 350 degrees for 8-10 minutes.

SALSA DIP

8-ounce package cream cheese, softened
 1 cup sour cream
 16-ounce jar salsa
 1 1/2 cups grated cheddar cheese
 Whisk cream cheese and sour cream together in a bowl. Spread a thin layer in a shallow dish or pan. Spread the salsa evenly on top of cream layer. Sprinkle cheese on top of salsa. Refrigerate until ready to serve. Serve with tortilla chips.

Our family really enjoys this dip. It is fast and easy to whip up in a short amount of time. Most all age groups like it. We live on a dairy farm and milk 140 cows plus all the extra jobs that go along with farming. We work with and for another family.

We have a garden that we work at together. Peas don't look good this year. Strawberries look nice. We plant pumpkins and a variety of gourds to sell in the fall.

We have three children. Renae is 17, Ryan, 15; and Reuben, 12. They will be glad when school is out. They are a wonderful help and fun to have around. Thanks for the great recipes. The recipe section is the first section I turn to.

Have a great and godly summer.

Lancaster Plans Night Out For Dairy Farmers

LANCASTER (Lancaster Co.) — Would you like to meet royalty, visit with other dairy farmers, enjoy musical entertainment, and be treated to an ice cream social all in one evening?

If such an evening interests you, be sure to accept the invitation of the Lancaster County Dairy Promotion Committee to attend the 1999 Dairy Princess Pageant, to be held in the main auditorium of the Lancaster County Farm and Home Center, on Saturday, June 12 for a milk punch and cheese reception to be followed by the pageant, the presentation of nine Dairy of Distinction awards, and musical entertainment provided by Heidi Miller.

Two contestants are competing for the title of Lancaster Dairy Princess. The Princess and Alternate will then represent Lancaster County Dairy Farmers at various events throughout the county and state, promoting the benefits of drinking milk and consuming dairy products. Four young women have also agreed to serve as dairy ambassadors, two as dairy misses, and eight as dairy darlings.

Elisa Ranck, Paradise, is the 17-year-old daughter of Donald and Virginia Ranck, owners of Verdant View Farm. She attends Pequea Valley High School, where she will return as a senior. Elisa has been a part-time employee at the Amazing Maize Maze at Cherry Crest Farm. In charge of feeding calves on the family farm, she also helps with her family's bed and breakfast. She is a member of her school's chamber singers, concert choir, and has participated in school musicals. National Honor Society is another organization Elisa is a member of. Her other interests include 4-H, American Field Service, girl's soccer, and prom committee. A talented musician, Elisa plays harp and piano and sings. She provides music for special occasions on request.

The family farm consists of 122 acres. Principal crops grown are corn and alfalfa. 42 Holsteins comprise the milking herd with a total of 88 animals total in the herd.

Elizabeth Young is the 16-year-old daughter of David and Carol Young, of Red Knob Farm in Peachbottom. A junior next year at Solanco High School, she is employed part-time by D&M Wallace Greenery, a local landscaper. She also helps occasionally with relief milking and sometimes feeds calves on the family farm. A member of 4-H and FFA, Liz, as she is called, also participates in the school color guard and marching band. A member of the National Honor Society, she also participates in the Lifeskills Group, which is a peer mentoring group in her high school. Voice lessons and participation in the school musical are other activities she has participated in. Her future plans include possibly attending college to major in horticulture.

Red Knob Farm is a family partnership that Elizabeth's parents participate in. The farm consists of a herd of 420 milking cows and approximately 400 more head of youngstock. 400 acres are cultivated with corn and hay as the main crops.

Elisa Ranck

Elizabeth Young

Four young ladies have agreed to serve as dairy ambassadors this year. Returning for a second visit is 14-year-old Laura Hess, daughter of Joe and Linda Hess of Mount Joy, owners and operators of a large dairy farm there. Laura has just completed eighth grade at Kraybill Mennonite School. She participates in field hockey at school and is active in her church youth group. Laura wants to participate as dairy ambassador because "she did it last year and really enjoyed it."

Jill Hoover, 16, daughter of Gordon and Carole Hoover of Gap, is also returning for a second year as dairy ambassador. She is a sophomore at Pequea Valley High School. Jill participates in her school band, chorus, and chambers singers, and is a youth choir member in her church. She also plays soccer at school. Jill is a member of FFA, and both dairy and community club in 4-H. Jill helps occasionally on the family farm her parents own and operate. Jill wants to serve as dairy ambassador because, she "thinks dairy promotion is very important." "I was an ambassador last year and look forward to this year," she said.

Two new additions to the promotion team are Kari Martin, 15 and Jenna Martin, 13, daughters of Leonard and Joyce Martin of Ephrata. Jenna is in seventh grade. She belongs to the junior youth group in her church. 4-H and band are some of her other activities. She believes she can make a difference by promoting dairy products, and that she will have no problem stating how she feels about the benefits of their consumption.

Kari is in eighth grade. She enjoys softball, basketball, and swimming. Sewing is also one of her favorite activities. She participates in junior youth group in church. Kari is a member of 4-H, and in school helps with yearbook and Boston Club. Kari thinks and knows that children around the world need to know about milk and milk products. She wants to be one of those who help them learn about their value.

Serving this year as dairy misses are Apryl Joy Becker, 11-year-old daughter of Merle and Janet Becker, Kinzers; Brenda Hoover, 12-year-old daughter of Gordon and Carole Hoover of Gap.

The Dairy Darlings for this year include Angela Rose Becker, daughter of Merle and Janet Becker, Kinzers; Laken Hoffer, daughter of Mr. & Mrs. Melvin Hoffer, Elizabethtown; Leslie Hoover, daughter of Gordon and Carole Hoover, Gap; Stephanie Kauffman, daughter of Harold and Anne Kauffman, Stevens; Amber Kiser, of Quarryville, daughter of John Kiser and Bonnie Kiser; Elizabeth Linde, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Axel Linde of Kirkwood; Stephanie Martin, daughter of Leonard and Joyce Martin of Ephrata; and Hannah Wentworth, daughter of Robert and Bonnie Wentworth of Quarryville.

My husband Robert and five children raise turkeys and enjoy farming.

I spend a lot of time in the kitchen, and of course we eat lots of turkey! Keep those good recipes coming!

My husband Craig and I milk 40 cows. We have about 65 head of cows. We have three children — Megean, 17; Aaron, 10; and Adam, 6. We all work together, helping one another with the chores. It's a wonderful place to raise a family, on the family farm. I hope your readers enjoy this casserole, because it's a favorite in our family.

Topping:
1 pound ground beef
12-ounces luncheon meat, cubed

— A BLAST OF CHEESE — CHEESE FUDGE

1/2 pound velveeta cheese
1/2 pound butter
1/2 cup cocoa or peanut butter
1/2 teaspoon vanilla
2 pounds powdered sugar
1/2 cup chopped nuts (optional)

Heat cheese and butter until soft enough to combine. Add remaining ingredients and stir and knead until thoroughly mixed. Spread in a large buttered pan and allow to cool and become firm. Cut. Yields: 3 pounds or 75 one-inch pieces.

One of America's favorite dairy products, cheese, is no longer just for sandwiches and salads. Different varieties of cheese are finding new uses in everyday cooking. Cheese adds more zest to casseroles, soups, and even desserts.

Adding cheese to your meal plans not only adds flavor, but also adds many of the nutrients found in milk. Cheese is a concentrated source of calcium, protein, riboflavin, and many other vitamins and minerals. Considering it takes about 10 pounds of milk to make one pound of cheddar cheese, cheese is a nutrient-dense food.

With so many different varieties of cheese, it is not hard at all for each member of your family to choose their favorite kind. Whether it is grilled in a sandwich, used in a salad, made into a cheesecake, or used for nachos, cheese is a good, solid foundation in today's society.

One of my favorite uses of cheese is to make cheese fudge — yes, cheese fudge. Try it — it will be one of the easiest and best-tasting fudges you've ever made.

SILK PIE

Crust:
1/2 cup peanut butter
1/2 cup light corn syrup
2 cups rice crispy cereal
Combine and press into 9-inch pie pan.

Filling:
1/2 cup butter
3/4 cup sugar
2 eggs
3 tablespoons cocoa (scant)

Beat butter, sugar, cocoa, and one egg for five minutes. Add second egg and beat five more minutes. Put in crust and freeze until firm.

Topping:
Top with desired amount of whipped cream or slightly thawed vanilla ice cream. Return to freezer and keep frozen until serving. If desired, garnish with chocolate curls just before serving. Makes one pie.

My husband Nelson and I rent a farm in picturesque Perry County. We milk a small herd of approximately 45 cows and farm 120 acres.

Last fall we became really thankful for our "smaller than average" farm. We were kept busy caring for our newborn twin sons and wondering if farming didn't seem like a "job on the side" in comparison! No, it wasn't quite that bad. . . .

Gerald and Jordon (seven months old) are our only children, and we think they're getting anxious to help Daddy on the farm. Their daddy is sure getting ready, at any rate!

RICE PUDDING

1/2 cup uncooked regular long grain rice
1 cup water
2 large eggs
1/2 cup sugar
1/2 cup raisins or chopped dried apricots

2 1/2 cups milk
1 teaspoon vanilla
Ground cinnamon or nutmeg
Whipped cream (optional)
Heat rice and water to boiling in 1 1/2 -quart saucepan, stirring once or twice; reduce heat to low. Cover and simmer 14 minutes. Do not lift cover or stir. All water should be absorbed.

Heat oven to 325 degrees. Beat eggs in ungreased 1 1/2 -quart casserole. Stir in sugar, raisins, milk, vanilla, salt, and hot rice. Sprinkle with cinnamon.

Bake uncovered 45 minutes, stirring every 15 minutes (over baking may cause pudding to curdle). Top of pudding will be very wet and not set.

Stir well; let stand 15 minutes. Enough liquid will be absorbed while standing to make pudding creamy. Serve warm or cover and refrigerate about three hours or until chilled. Serve with whipped cream. Refrigerate any remaining dessert.

Timesaving tip: Leftover rice can also be used in this recipe. Use 2 cups rice and increase baking time by 5 minutes.

I have three grandchildren, Christopher Spatz, 8; Stephanie Spatz, 6; and Brandon Stitzel, 18 months old. They are a big part of my life and provide me with great joy. My most recent excitement was the announcement that my husband and I will again become grandparents around October. We are very excited.

I am Diane Myers from Boiling Springs. I live at home with my parents, Richard and Ethel, sister Peggy, and brother Mark. On Sept. 18 this year I will marry Bert Black and move out of the house. I've enclosed our picture.

I use this recipe for "Food Day" at work. It is a special day where everyone brings in food to share during the day.

OLD-FASHIONED SOFT SUGAR COOKIES

2 cups sugar
1/2 cup butter
1/2 cup lard
1 cup buttermilk
4 eggs
1 teaspoon baking soda
1 teaspoon cream of tartar
5 1/2 cups flour

Thoroughly cream the sugar and shortening, which has been melted. Stir in the buttermilk and eggs. Add the dry ingredients, which have been sifted together. Mix well. Dough will be sticky. Chill overnight.

Roll on floured board to 1/2 -inch thickness. Cut out with cookie cutter.

Bake at 350 degrees for 10 minutes.

Decorate with icing and colored sugar. They are also very good plain.

For drop cookies, do not chill. Our family lives in Mount Aetna. My husband and I have three children — Gereon, Amanda, and Erin. Our son, Gereon, has worked on Hook Dairy Farm the past eight years.

The recipe I've provided is a favorite. My mother, sisters, and I and all the kids get together around Christmastime and make these cookies. We usually multiply the recipe about 10 times.

We enjoy reading Lancaster Farming and hope you enjoy the cookies.

4-H HAPPENINGS

Brackney 4-H Clover Club

On Sunday, May 16, 28 people attended the Brackney 4-H Clover Club meeting at Silver Lake.

All five officers were present: Kaleena Young is the club president and her sister Brianna is the vice-president. Lisa Harasymczuk is the club's treasurer, and Chelsea Parvin is the secretary. Khayla Shearer is the club's newspaper reporter.

The Silver Lake Ladies Club donated $100 to help the Brackney 4-H Club clean up

Silver Lake Fire Hall playground and $55 of this donation went to buying paint and brushes. During the 4-H club meeting, two trees were planted and tires were set up where the other trees will be planted in the future. Club members also painted the swingset.

4-H Clover club members have until June to get the activity books they need. Club leaders Carol Young and Sue Parvin are arranging for cake decorating meetings. Members have to bring $4 to one meeting for treasury dues and that will take care of all their dues for the year.

Brackney 4-H Clover Club's next meeting is scheduled Sunday, June 13, at the Silver Lake Fire Hall at 4 p.m. If the weather is good, the club will meet outside on the playground. At the June 13 meeting, the sewing club members will be presenting their projects to the Clover club before their fashion review on June 30.

Mifflin County 4-H Baby Beef Club

The last meeting of the Mifflin County 4-H Baby Beef Club was on May 13 at Tim Aumiller's in McVeytown.

Chippy Aumiller and Paul Neer did a hoof trimming demonstration. Neer also touched on how a hoof should be trimmed and the different parts of a hoof.

A short business meeting followed the demonstration.

For the next meeting, members will be making hoagies on June 10 between 5-8 p.m. at the Lumina Center in Lewistown. The Mifflin County Youth Program Committee is sponsoring the hoagie sale for all clubs to participate in. The clubs that participate in the sale will get half of the profits they sell.

69th National 4-H Conference

Five Delaware teens attached the 69th National 4-H Conference this spring in the National 4-H Center in Washington, D.C.

Representing the First State were Katie Daly of Newark, Zina Hense of Lewes, Sherri Hobbs of Wyoming, Nelson Smith of Rehoboth Beach, and Rebecca Vanderwende of Greenwood.

Sponsored by the U.S. Secretary of Agriculture each year, this conference brings together hundreds of 4-H members from the United States, Canada, Virgin Islands, and Puerto Rico to work in partnership with volunteer leaders and cooperative extension staff to discuss a range of 4-H issues. The group learns what individual states are doing, then makes recommendations for the 4-H program nationally. The conference encourages young people to have a voice and to work with adults to make communities better places for everyone.

The theme of this year's conference - Beyond Barriers - emphasized the need for youth to identify the things they perceive to be barriers and to discuss how to overcome them.

Joy Sparks, state program coordinator for 4-H youth development at the University of Delaware, said topics at this year's conference centered on a number of key issues, including how to enhance the diversity of the 4-H programs to provide opportunities and experiences to all people. Discussions also touched on ways to retain early teens in 4-H clubs and how to encourage 4-H alumni to become active.

"The conference served as a challenge to all the 4-H representatives," said Sparks. By the end of the week, they had gained knowledge and experience, and were able to recommend teen leadership activities and to serve as ambassadors in implementing programs."

In addition to leadership workshops and other training sessions, conference attendees met officials from the U.S. Department of Agriculture and visited the Smithsonian Institute and Capitol Hill.

"They met with Rep Michael Castle and aides to Sen. Joseph Biden and Sen. William Roth" said Sparks.

The final report, along with recommendations written by conference teens, was presented before an audience of 4-H leaders and USDA officials including Dan Glickman, U.S. secretary of agriculture.

Environmental Field Day At Wakefield Farm

LINDA WILLIAMS
Bedford Co. Correspondent
BEDFORD (Bedford Co.) — Over the years, blue skies and May sunshine have greeted nearly every first grade class taking an environmental field day trip to the Wakefield Farm in Friends Cove.

And so it was this year.

Holding an environmental field day at the Wakefield Farm was the idea of Beverly Wakefield, a first-grade teacher at Bedford Elementary School who lives at the farm with her husband Jim, and Laura Jackson, an environmental teacher at Bedford High School who teaches ninth grade students.

Beverly's husband Jim and his brother Tom are partners in the 400-acre dairy farm.

The two teachers decided that allowing some of the ninth grade students to join in the educational event by serving as teachers to the first-graders would be beneficial.

"We decided it would be a great project for both age groups," explained Beverly. "I would bring my first graders to the farm where they could learn first-hand how the

A ninth-grade student at Bedford High School, Bridgette Leach explains some of the types of pond life to these Bedford Elementary first-grade students.

From the left, first-grade teacher and dairy farmer wife Beverly Wakefield kneels to identify and explain some of the pond life in this first grader's sieve, while others scoop and look.

This plastic sheet is laid out over top of the lawn and other items and slopes down hill. The first-grade students dump colored water onto it to demonstrate the concept of a watershed, and how all areas of the watershed affect the quality of the main receiving body of water. At this station, the Chesapeake Bay is the body of water of concern.

With two older students manning the station, a group of first-grade students dumps items into the Super-Duper Recycling Machine, and then receive items that can be made from recycled materials.

environment and farming relate. Laura would bring her older students to assist in teaching."

This year there were about 200 first grade students and about 70 ninth grade students.

It takes weeks to prepare the farm for the visit, which includes erecting a teepee.

(Turn to Page B31)

Educational stations are set up to deal with different and perhaps some of the more commonly interesting aspects of the environment — the station topics are flowers, Native Americans, recycling; predator/prey relationships, birds, and making an environmental education game.

During the morning, the group of students toured each of the educational stations, with ninth graders and the two teachers presenting different stations.

After a box lunch (that included ice cream cones), the recharged students went onto the rest of the day-long program.

The different afternoon stations included an "energy hike;" a tour of the barn; a station that studied animal habitats; one that featured natural dyes; one on pond life; and one on the Chesapeake Bay.

For their efforts, both Mrs. Wakefield and Mrs. Jackson were honored their year as teachers of the year by radio station KDKA of Pittsburgh.

"It was the combined effort of so many students which brought us the award," Jackson said.

Among all the educational stations, the one on pond life seems to be the most popular.

Kneeling or squatting along the bank of the pond, each first-grade student is able to reach into the pond with a sieve net and scoop out a sample of the variety of life.

Ninth graders outfitted in hip boot waders — sometimes in the pond, other times on the bank — help the first-graders' scooping attempts and with identifying the wriggling contents.

"It's a day these kids never forget," said one of the participating teachers. "They certainly learn a lot more than they would from a text book."

The popular station is probably the Native American station, where older students perform storytelling and teach a dance.

At the recycling station, a cardboard box is used as a recycling bin and a ninth grader sits in the bin.

First graders throw various items into the bin, and the ninth grader tosses out something that could be made by recycling.

"It's an exciting day," said Mrs. Wakefield, "and we are happy to be able to use our farm for this project."

A rain dance is taught by three ninth grade students of Bedford High School to give first graders.

Y2K Kits Available At Extension Offices

COLUMBUS, Ohio — To help small businesses and farm operations prepare for the year 2000, Y2K Jumpstart Kits are available free of charge from county and district offices of Ohio State University Extension.

"The kits are for small to medium businesses that don't have the money or personnel to devote to solving Y2K problems like large enterprises do," said Mark Byers, Ohio State University Extension health and safety specialist. "Business with date-sensitive equipment and technology could have the most problems, if they happen."

The kits allow users to complete an inventory of their assets that might be impacted by Y2K problems, determine how big the problems could be, and develop contingency plans and remediation activities for dealing with the problems, Byers said.

"Most of the potential problems may not be life-threatening things, but they could cost some time and money to fix and may cause small businesses to miss receiving timely information," he said. "Any machinery or piece of equipment that is date-sensitive could be affected, so accounting problems could occur, automated systems could stop, security systems could shut down, or even answering machines that record time and date could have troubles."

On a farm, computers with record-keeping software, automated livestock feeding or watering systems, monitoring equipment on grain dryers, or any other equipment with a timer could experience problems.

"Something is going to happen when the year 2000 comes, but to what degree we'll find out," Byers said. "So it's a good idea to be prepared, fix what would obviously be a problem and come up with some contingency plans for things that potentially could cause trouble."

The Y2K Jumpstart Kits won't actually fix Y2K problems for small businesses, but they will help small businesses assess their vulnerability and develop plans to solve potential problems. The kits contain an easy-to-use compact disk with everything small businesses should need to conduct Y2K planning.

A checklist on the disk helps users quickly learn Y2K basics and gauge vulnerabilities within computer systems, equipment, suppliers and other potential problem areas. Also included is a template to help users quickly draft effective contingency plans using a simplified and streamlined approach.

"An important thing to realize is that small businesses may not have problems with their own equipment, but other businesses that supply items they need to operate could," he said. "If small businesses don't have alternative sources of supplies lined up, they could be in trouble. So an important part of the process is calling other vendors and suppliers to see where their equipment stands."

The Y2K Jumpstart Kits were developed by the Manufacturing Extension Partnership, a cooperative program between the U.S. Department of Commerce, U.S. Department of Agriculture and the U.S. Small Business Administration. The Manufacturing Extension Partnership also offers action planning, assessment and remediation project planning workshops.

The partnership was formed to distribute Y2K materials and perform training for small businesses.

For assistance in using the Y2K Jumpstart Kits and for Y2K compliance research guidance, those interested can call the Manufacturing Extension Partnership at (800) Y2K-7557 or visit the partnership's website (<http://2ykhlp.nist.gov>). For schedules and registration information on Y2K workshops or to receive the Y2K Jumpstart Kit, call (800) MEP-4MFG, (800) U-ASK-SBA or contact local offices of Ohio State University Extension. For more information about Y2K and resources for dealing with potential problems, people also can visit Ohio State University Extension's Guide to Y2K website at (http://www.ag.ohio-state.edu/~y2k_link/).

East Bridgewater 4-H Club

The East Bridgewater 4-H Club conducted a reorganizational meeting on April 15 at the home of David and Renee Tyler.

Certificates and pins were presented.

The floor was opened for nominations and the standings were Jennifer Benio, president; Jennifer Aldrich, vice president; Hilary Travis, secretary; Helena Tyler, treasurer; Elisabeth Small, news reporter; Mariah Castrogiovanni, Emily Travis, Tawny McGraw, and Trevor Small, song and game leaders; and Shannon Saurina, refreshment chairperson.

The club voted and dues will stay at $2 per year. The club will have a float in the Memorial Day parade this May.

Green Grove

Community 4-H Club

The Green Grove Community 4-H Club conducted its first project meeting April 17 at the Green Grove Pilgrim Holiness Church. After meeting at the church, the members split into three groups: fishing, air rifle, and hiking.

Four members went to Lackawanna State Park to enjoy a few hours of fishing. Out of the four members, three caught fish. Kayla Bibalo and Nathaniel Leach caught their first trout.

Three members from the club stayed at the air rifle range on the church grounds. They were joined by Mike Maas who was a guest of one of the members. All spent their time sighting in the rifles and target practicing.

Ten of the 4-H club members went hiking at Lackawanna State Park. There they learned to watch for trail markers and what to do if they get lost in the woods.

Paws And Tails 4-H Club

April 12 was the club's first meeting. Mrs. Vitale introduced the club to a new form of training, called Free Style or dancing with your dog. The club watched a video of dogs and their owners dancing to music such as "Rescue Me." On April 19 the Penn State teams meet with Mrs. Vitale to start preparing for competition.

Another meeting was conducted April 26. At this time officers were elected. President is Renee Coy, vice president, Jamie Tuttle; secretary, Jessica Cassella; treasurer, Alice Oleniacz; and reporters are Raelene J. Coy and Kyle Gensel.

The club watched part of another video of a dog doing 21 dance steps. Mrs. Vitale showed the club how the training is done.

Farming Comes From The Heart At Heavens Blessin's Farm

CAROLYN N. MOYER
Tloga Co. Correspondent
LINDEN (Lycoming Co.) — Some things are meant to be.

That's exactly what Ernie and Wanda Derr believe about the opportunities they've had, as they've strived to build a profitable dairy operation from modest beginnings.

How else could a 9-year-old's 4-H dairy project grow into Heavens Blessin's Farm, a 60-cow dairy located in the hills of Pennsylvania?

Neither Wanda's nor Ernie's parents farmed, although both families grew up in the country.

Ernie's father once worked as a herdsman and often helped neighboring farmers on his days off from his factory job.

Wanda's family resided on what she calls a 35-acre gentleman's farm where, at one point, they housed six dairy cows, which they milked by hand, along with some horses and pigs and beef cattle.

Wanda and Ernie were members of 4-H. In fact they met at the Hughesville Fair in 1981 as they were showing beef cattle.

Ernie also kept a dairy project, and with the help of a neighboring farmer, was able to gain valuable work experience in exchange for animal housing.

"If it wouldn't have been for that man, I wouldn't be where I am right now," said Ernie. "I worked for him to feed my cattle. I worked for him from the time I was 11 years old until I was just about out of school."

Even as a boy as young as seven, Ernie knew what profession he wanted to pursue.

"My Dad said I did more farming on the basement floor when I was young, than any farmers ever did around the county," laughed Ernie. "I always wanted to be a farmer."

After Wanda and Ernie met, they decided to buy some cows together and slowly increased the size of their herd.

The two married in June of 1984, and leased their cows out to neighboring farmers. In February of 1986, they started milking cows on their own.

"When we started milking we had 16 milking cows of our own and we soon bought 10 more," Ernie said. "We started in Lairds-

Matt Derr, 11, climbs the fence after he finishes feeding hay to the heifers.

Heavens Blessin's Farm is nestled in the rolling hills of north central Pennsylvania. The farm, which they purchased nearly three years ago, consists of 112 acres. They rent an additional 118 acres of ground.

ville on Roy Schultz's Farm. We milked there for almost two years. Then we moved to the Don Lepley Farm in Cogan Station and we were there for four and a half years.

"Then we moved to the Barry Kinley Farm and were there for four years. We just made our mind up that we were either going to buy a farm or get out," explained Ernie.

"We were really spinning our wheels. She was working and I was trying to run the farm and doing trucking and we just weren't getting anywhere."

Ironically enough, Harry and Bona Waltz found the Derrs at the same time the Derrs were searching for something different.

"They found us," said Wanda. "They were wonderful. They wanted this to continue to be a farm."

Although the Derrs have milked both Holsteins and Jerseys, the Jerseys now dominate the herd.

"We started out with all Jerseys. Then we got into some Holsteins and last year we switched around and got into a protein market with DFA and we found it paid us a little more, so we did some regrouping and now we have close to 100 head."

Added Wanda, "We're making more milk now than we ever have, even with the Holsteins, and I say, 'See. God told you, we're supposed to have all Jerseys!'"

They try to keep 52 cows milking at all times and, although they're not on official test, they meter their production once a month to make feed adjustments and to keep track of each cow's performance.

They plan to raise 15-20 replacements every year and grow most of their own feed.

Crops include about 80 acres of corn, 80 acres of alfalfa and some mixed hay.

This summer they plan to put up another silo so they can feed both corn silage and haylage.

Eventually, they'd like the farm to be a showplace but they admit that they have a lot of work to do to reach that goal. Wanda's off-farm job helps by providing health and dental insurance as well as covering family expenses and what she equates to a house mortgage.

"The farm is basically self sufficient. I pay anything that comes from the house. We try to keep things separate to make the farm as profitable as possible," said Wanda. "The biggest thing is the insurance. That's hard to swing on three kids and two adults."

Wanda, who earned her teaching degree while farming and raising a family, now teaches math at Loyalsock Middle School.

"My goal, teaching wise, is to be able to walk out of my job whenever I want to, and not have to hang around there when I don't want to, knowing that I have this job waiting for me in the wings, because this is another job."

Right now, Wanda admits she can't spend as much time on the farm as she'd like to because of the kids' involvement in extra curricular activities, the time she devotes to teaching eighth graders, doing

After years of renting a dairy not far away, the Derr family purchased this property near Linden and are in the process of renovating the facilities.

She also spends time as a 4-H leader and works with the dairy princess committee for Lycoming County.

Ernie depends on the help he gets from the kids, Seth, Matt and Ashley.

Seth voluntarily rises at 5:30 a.m. and helps in the barn until 6:30 a.m., when he returns to the house to get ready for eighth grade at Jersey Shore Middle School.

Matt helps feed and bed the animals, and Ashley is in charge of feeding her two baby calves. The younger siblings attend the elementary school in Salladasburg.

In exchange for their help on the farm, the kids earn cows.

The kids are also each allowed to participate in one sport, participate in Scouts and are continuing the family 4-H tradition where they proudly show their Jerseys as part of the State Road 4-H Club.

The whole family is also involved in their local church where they feel like they're part of a large family.

"I'm no preacher by any means, and I don't profess to be a missionary or anything like that, but we don't get anything unless it's from (God)," said Ernie.

Wanda feels privileged to be able to raise the kids in their church and recognizes that there's always room to grow.

"We have our faults and our good points," said Wanda, "and people love us both ways, thank God!"

With the farm business as well as the household items, the Derrs carefully watch their finances.

"We're maybe a little different than some people who think to make a lot of milk is to make a lot of money," said Ernie.

"That hasn't really been our goal. I figure what's left in my pocket at the end of the month is what matters."

They readily admit that most of their equipment is old, they spend a modest amount on feed and make improvements only as they can.

So far, they have converted an old bank barn into a modern tie-stall dairy facility by replacing walls and adding 56 feet in length. They also installed a gutter cleaner, pipeline and bulk tank.

Dreams for the future include adding more silos, implementing a total mixed ration feeding program and building better heifer facilities.

"Everyone has an ideal goal and it's good to have it," said Wanda. "But it's also good to be able to accept if you're not going to reach it. You have to reach for the stars, but be happy if you get to the moon."

She admits that many farmers dream of having the nice looking farm, the cows that do well in the show ring, with the high DHIR records or bulls in stud, or to have an excellent cow.

Fifteen-year-old Seth Derr works on bedding the cows as part of his daily chores.

"They are dreams. Whether we reach them or not, who knows, and maybe, if one of the kids wants to take over, we can help them to get there. The kids have already knocked off goals that I didn't think would be knocked off until Ashley was at the end of her 4-H career," said Wanda.

Those achieved goals include beating Ernie's eighth place finish in state competition, which was accomplished the very first year Seth competed at the Pa. All-American when he placed sixth. The next goal was to place in the top five. Matt wiped that mark off the board as he placed third at states in the fall of 1998 and knocked off the Louisville goal at the same time.

Next, the family hopes to have a cow place first or second in state competition.

"That's basically what we've done all along. We have a long term goal and this is our first step. When we reach that step, we go on to the next goal," said Wanda.

What makes life easier for the young couple also is the fact that lots of people are willing to help.

"This year my dad retired and he's helping us some. I've got some real good neighbors who helped me plant corn. We work together around here. I've got a neighbor over the hill and we work back and forth quite a little bit and it makes it easier for everybody. It's kind of getting back to the way things used to be done," said Ernie.

As the couple looks back, they can't help but think of the many people who helped them out with moral support, physical labor and opportunities.

"The people we bought this place from wanted it to stay a farm. It's all just supposed to be. If we weren't supposed to be here, we wouldn't be. Yes, we have a lot of fixing up to do, but give us 15 years," said Wanda.

Communication is key in making the whole operation work.

"We make joint decisions. If we don't agree, it doesn't get done," said Wanda.

"If she says, 'No,' I say, 'Alright,'" laughed Ernie.

As they look at their three children, they hope that one day they will be interested in continuing the farming tradition, but the farm will not be handed over on a silver platter.

"They're going to have to buy it," said Wanda.

Added Ernie, "We know people who the farm has been handed to them and they just let them run it right down to nothing. They're not going to do something like that to something I worked all my life to get."

They've even considered selling their development rights, but at this time, there are too many reasons not to.

Although it would ease the financial pressures of today, they also have to consider the future of their children and the realities of farming.

"There's always that chance that a hard time would come and I could sell a lot to keep the farm going," said Ernie.

"There's also a chance that one or all the kids would like to come back to the farm and join in and become partners. It would make everything financially easier, but speaking on the point of watching all my kids at school, financially easier is not better," added Wanda.

As for the future, the Derrs feel confident that the size of the farm won't be as much a factor as the management practices on that farm.

"It's going to be tough for the small guy. He's going to have to keep his management up to date, and you're always going to have to be growing," Ernie said.

"If we look back to when we were our kids' age, 35-40 cows was a big dairy. Now if there are 50-60 cows, you have an average dairy," said Ernie. "We've had hard times, but the good Lord has always pulled us through them."

"You've got to keep your head on straight," added Wanda. "With any kid, it doesn't matter what their goal in life is. It doesn't matter what career they choose to take, they see the end product and they head right for the end product. You know, the big fancy tractors, the newer equipment, the beautiful farm and completely up-to-date modern house and the best vehicles and the kids in the best clothing. Everything. That's the end product. It's a long road to get there," said Wanda.

"Our ultimate goal is to instill the same thing in our kids that somehow got instilled in us; that hard work pays off, it's alright to have people help you, but don't expect people to hand everything to you," she said.

"God has given us a lot of things and it's what we do to make it work," said Wanda. "We've made a lot of mistakes along the way. Perfection is not here. I listen to anybody who will give me information. Anybody who is willing to share a secret with me to how to get my cows to grow bigger or a way to feed their cows or what to do in the fields. We will listen to anybody's advice and sometimes we'll try it and sometimes we'll say that's not for us."

When people say that it's impossible for young kids to start farming, the Derrs say they're living proof that it can be done. The incentive to do it, said Wanda, is in your heart.

"I look forward to getting up every morning and going to the barn. I enjoy what I do and it would be awful hard for me to go back and work for somebody else," said Ernie.

"We've been blessed," summed up Wanda. "It's such a great feeling to come to the crossroads and look out and say all this is ours!"

Our smallest baler comes with BIG features

Our Model 638 Roll-Belt™ round baler is the smallest in the line, but it has the same features and functions as New Holland's larger balers. You can count on dense, uniform 4-ft-by-4-ft bales every time.

- Roll-Belt design makes uniform bales weighing up to 750 lbs
- Requires a minimum 40 PTO hp tractor
- Single-arm twine system reduces wrapping time by applying two strands
- Road/trailing lights are included

See the NEW Model 638 today!

We Breed Champions, Too!

Well, we really don't "breed" them, but we feel each mixer that we produce is a champion in every way. We take great care in designing each machine before it is built. We also track each machine after it leaves our facility, making sure it is delivered to you on time, and ready to go to work the minute it is off the truck. We then follow the life of the Mixer, making sure that the customer is happy with the machine, long after the sale. If you want a company that takes as much pride in their product as we know you do in yours, give us a call.

Everything on This Tractor is Exceptional

Even the price tag

More power, more comfort and more productivity. Balanced with less maintenance, less operator fatigue and economically priced. An exceptional tractor designed with an innovative power-shift transmission, deluxe super-quiet cab and a new electronic 3-point hitch.

Kubota's M-110 (88 PTOHP) and M-120 (98 PTOHP) 2WD and 4WD tractors come with 16F/16R operated by a single-lever, 16-bit microprocessor wet-disc clutch, Kubota's 5-cylinder diesel engine and an exceptional cab that includes heater/air conditioning, optional stereo, radio/cassette and an adjustable operator's seat.

On the 4WD model, the bevel gear front-wheel drive with bi-speed turn and electro-hydraulic front and rear differential locks provide enhanced maneuverability and increased traction. Test drive one at your Kubota dealer today.

MESSICK - Your Full Line Case IH DMI Dealer

ecolo-tiger[®] 527B Primary Tillage Tool

5-shanks, 27" centers, 140-180 HP Required

Eliminate Compaction, Improve Soil Tillage and Manage Crop Residue

- Manage Residue: The discs aggressively cut, size and mix residue uniformly into the soil in preparation for deep tillage. Covering attachments can be added to parabolic shanks to incorporate more residue into the soil. Coupler units are also available.
- Compaction Control: Parabolic shanks with patented Case IH tiger points aggressively fracture and relocate compaction. Minimum Residue Disturbance shanks and couplers are also available to provide excellent tillage while leaving the surface relatively undisturbed.
- Field Finishing: The hydraulic disc level r manages soil and residue across the soil surface so it settles level prior to secondary tillage and planting.

CLAAS

 Meeting all your harvesting needs!

Chopping quality is extremely important for silage and also digestion of the feed. Sharp knives and a precisely adjusted shearbar guarantee a clean cut and even crop flow. Four intake and precompression rollers - two upper and two lower rollers - compress the crop densely and transport it to the chopping cylinder. The latest generation of metal detectors is located in the lower front roller. The gearbox provides for 6 different chop lengths. The changeover between two lengths in each range can be done at the touch of a button. The impressive CLAAS chopping cylinder on all JAGUAR models is a full 29.5" wide with 24 knives in V-formation gives 28,800 cuts per minute. The shearbar is adjusted to the knives without tools.

The result is ease of maintenance, with contact adjustment and a power saving cut, plus excellent forage quality.

The high quality of corn forage produced by the JAGUAR is derived from the CLAAS corn cracker. Two saw toothed rollers run at different speeds with 20% difference to open up virtually every kernel. This means good quality silage that is easily digested.

PA DHIA Annual Member Management Report

DAVE SLUSSER General Manager

STATE COLLEGE (Centre Co.) — It has been an honor to serve you as your general manager for the last five years.

This report will include what we have accomplished these last five years, our plans for 1999, and projections into the Twenty-first Century.

PA DHIA has completed the third straight year of profit and introduced a 1999 budget that required no feed adjustment. We are very proud of this record, however five years ago it was a different story.

In 1994, PA DHIA had a major operating loss, and along with National DHIA, N.E. DHIA, Vermont DHIA, and Ohio DHIA, was involved in a major lawsuit.

For the next 3 1/2 years, the association paid out over $1,500,000.00 in debt reduction and legal fees, however during that same period of time new services and accomplishments occurred.

Our innocence was vindicated, however not before accumulating large legal bills.

Since this time, PA DHIA has moved forward with new services and accomplishments. They are as follows:

- 1) developed a Strategic Long Range Plan.
- 2) improved accuracy of usable records from 76% to 83% (highest in the Nation)
- 3) introduced MUN testing, having tested to date 1.5 million cows
- 4) supported MUN with educational meetings
- 5) became first DHIA to transfer data to farmers and consultants through the Internet.
- 6) introduced Performance Economics to DHIA.
- 7) became the national leader in innovative test plans.

This past year was no exception to our forward progress. A new cost reduced owner-sampler program, which recorded a 45 percent growth during the year was introduced.

Other accomplishments were:

- 1) a statewide membership marketing program with David Bigelow.

- 2) PA DHIA farm consulting service with George Cudoc.

- 3) partnering our truck routes with milk cooperatives, partnering in field service with AI Cooperatives.

- 4) a new nitrogen management report

- 5) new laser printers for farm management reports.

- 6) developed Heifer 98, the first Windows 95, 98, NT farm management software

- 7) worked hard to get uniformity in MUN testing throughout the US DHIA system.

- 8) worked to restore unity in National DHIA

- 9) provided a field certification survey for California DHIA
- 10) began development of other outside sources of income.

None of these accomplishments could have been accomplished without the hard work and loyalty of our members and employees. This spirit will be the driving force that propels us into the next century.

PA DHIA is not a cost to dairymen but an investment.

If you are not getting a 200-percent return on your investment, please give us a call. We can and will improve your profits.

George Cudoc can be a valuable help in the utilization of your PA DHIA records. I have gotten nothing but positive comments from our members who have used his service.

If you have three consecutive MUN tests with PA DHIA, you are entitled to a free farm visit from George upon your request. Our service will improve farm profitability through improved milk quality and production efficiency. No other DHIA supports it membership with such service or accuracy of information.

Plans for 1999 are more exciting. Just released is our Windows 95, 98, NT labAnalyst program. This program, designed for users of lab test analysis, SAP herds, and consultants, is powerful.

Costing only $30, the program is an awesome product. the MUN report, somatic cell report, and many other reports are just as they appear on hard copy in your reports.

Our herd management program, Barn Owl 2000 (now in test herds) will include Heifer 98 and the labAnalyst program. These powerful programs are developed by our farmer-owned and controlled PA DHIA.

Most of our accomplishments could not have been possible without having our own Data Processing Center and programmers.

Other activities being planned for 1999 are:

- 1) converting entirely to PC processing

- 2) research possibilities of connecting Barn Owl 2000 to a financial package

- 3) performing our own meter repair and certification of meters

- 4) performing new lab services

- 5) seeking further partnering including breed associations

- 6) continuing our attempt to bring National DHIA together.

The next century will bring new excitement and challenges to Pennsylvania and PA DHIA.

Farm management information technology will be the future with large and small herds alike.

Data entry services and sample collection will be important roles for our field service. The most powerful computer programs in the world are worthless without high quality data entry. PA DHIA will project more information into the future, giving projected calving intervals, days open and cash flow.

Closer relationships will evolve between our cooperative and other DHIA's.

Your PA DHIA will be providing American farm management technology, information technology, and processing throughout the world via the Internet. With this information highway we will increase the opportunity for members to market genetics.

PA DHIA has challenged the status quo in American DHIA's and now we are challenging it throughout the world. Dairy farmers can govern and control their own cooperative and their own destiny.

Farmer to farmer we can improve the world one cow at a time.

Component Tests Tell You More Than What's In The Milk

GEORGE CUDOC

Consulting Dairyman

STATE COLLEGE (Centre Co.) — In the past, butterfat and protein component tests were used mostly to identify superior cows.

Breeding superior cows would increase a dairy farm's milk payment - which is based heavily on protein and butterfat content.

Component tests were seldom used to sharpen management skills. But today's dairymen can work with on-farm professionals to look at component testing in a much broader scope.

DHIA fat and protein information tells a lot about the nutritional status of dairy cows. Individual data that can be sorted into groups helps pinpoint specific places to start your quest to improve nutritional management. This is so much more useful than bulk tank information which suggests problems exist, but gives no information as to where you begin to solve them.

Butterfat is the oldest component test and still the most important in that it reflects a cow's rumen health.

We know that cows typically produce milk in the early weeks of lactation with a butterfat test above normal. As lactation proceeds, fat levels go down while milk production peaks, then gradually go back up.

Early-lactation butterfat tests which are below normal (3.8 percent in Holsteins) may not seem significant at the time, but will rumen acidosis cause laminitis later in the lactation? What about high fat tests? Can we learn something from this, or does it just indicate higher prices for our milk?

A very high test in early lactation might mean your cows are burning fat reserves at an accelerated rate. You may want a vet to check them for ketosis.

The goal is using butterfat as a measure of rumen health is to ward off problems that may erode profits later. Poor performance and sick cow treatment costs are huge profit robbers.

Milk protein has overtaken butterfat as the largest basis of payment to farms, except in rare situations. This is reason enough to use the component test in managing nutrition.

Low protein doesn't just reduce the value of milk. Low protein, along with high butterfat, usually indicates low dry matter intake, which is often associated with metabolic disorders such as ketosis.

Drops in protein alone indicate a shortfall in energy consumed by your cows. This may be due to either reduced dry matter intake or a lack of fermentable carbohydrates in the diet.

Identifying the cause of low protein will put you on track to preventing a repetition. Look at factors relating to cow comfort when dry matter intakes is the problem. Poor ration formulation or delivery can cause low protein tests even when a cow's environment is all that it should be.

MUN (milk urea nitrogen) testing is another component test now becoming available, and it can have significant impact on bottom-line performance.

PA DHIA Consulting
Dairyman

Testing individual cows for MUN, like butterfat and protein, can help evaluate nutrition performance and give insight to problems associated with the nutritional needs of your cows.

In general, high MUN values indicate protein utilization is not what it should be. Overfeeding protein, of course, may be responsible, but more often than not the problem is a combination of less-than-desirable carbohydrate levels and too much, or the wrong kind, of protein.

The use of MUN, along with protein tests, can point the way to better cow nutrition.

Low MUN, along with low protein in lactation, tells you that rumen-degradable protein and carbohydrates are both low.

Low MUN, along with high protein, shows low degradable protein with excess degradable carbohydrates.

Higher Somatic Cell Standards Coming Pa.DHIA Testing, Reports Can Help

DAVE SLUSSER
General Manager
PA DHIA

STATE COLLEGE (Dauphin Co.) — As we approach the new millennium, food safety, or in our case milk safety and quality from the cow to the dairy case, will be a watchword.

Even though we have the cleanest milk in the world, the pressure will always be on.

According to Jim Dickrell, president of the National Mastitis Council (NMC), his organization is moving forward to lower the somatic cell count (SCC) regulatory limit from 750,000 to 400,000 cells per milliliter.

The NMC recommends the regulatory limits be lowered to 600,000 SCC by Jan. 1, 2001; 500,000 SCC by June 1, 2002; and 400,000 SCC by Jan. 1, 2003.

They also recommend the limits be calculated using a geometric mean (based on 12 tests over three months) rather than using the simple arithmetic average.

While Pa.DHIA members don't see the lowering of the legal limit to 400,000 cells/ml as a major concern, their SCC average is well below 400,000.

Those with herds not on test, or managers not using their DHIA information, may be in for problems.

Lowering your SCC well below 400,000 has major benefits beyond ensuring you of a market for your milk. Low SCC count cows produce more milk, demand higher component prices, and are healthier.

By maintaining a SCC count between 100,000 and 300,000, research and history have proven you will generate more income by increased production and higher premium payments.

The cost of the Pa.DHIA test, of treating cows and of discarded milk, will be returned two to six times, depending on your level of infection.

Subclinical mastitis will not show up on the strip-cap or the milk strainer, but will lower your production and rob you of quality premiums and component prices. One or two high count cows could contaminate an entire tank of milk and that situation will get worse as we approach a legal limit of 400,000 cells/ml.

The Pa.DHIA SCC report will pinpoint the problem cows each month and calculate your losses from each cow.

Realizing that a farm manager's time is very short this time of year, be sure to have someone appraise your SCC Report on your behalf, if you cannot.

You are talking about thousands of dollars in losses per year by not paying attention to each cow in your herd. No matter what your herd size is, it all comes down to one cow at a time.

Recommended steps to keep your SCC under control are:

1. Maintain your milking equipment properly by checking the vacuum levels at each milking and by having an expert check your system at least twice per year.

2. Take your milking procedures seriously. Your best people should be milking your cows. Use individual towels, pre-dip and post-dip, and get the milkers on and off in time. I recommend that all your milkers attend a milking school.

3. Test your cows with Pa.DHIA and use this information to treat, culture, and dry treat high cows. Cows that do not respond to treatment should be beefed.

4. Have your veterinarian review your Pa.DHIA information each month during your herd health check, and act on this information.

By following these steps, you will improve your income, assure yourself of a market for your milk, and make a major contribution to food safety from the cow to the dairy case.

Quality Service

That Exceeds Expectations

DAVID BIGELOW
Training Coordinator

STATE COLLEGE (Centre Co.) — PA DHIA is, in itself, a quality driven cooperative that provides a full range of farm management record keeping options for its membership.

Starting right at the farm with the milk sampling and data collection, the PA DHIA membership controls all aspects of the testing procedures through representation on the state board of directors.

Uniquely positioned, PA DHIA is the only fully-owned DHIA cooperative in the nation which includes field, lab, consulting and processing services.

Aggressive marketing continues to bring favorable results, through the technicians starting a record number of owner-sampler herds on test.

Within the past year, our market share has seen an overwhelming increase of 61 percent or over 6,000 new cows added to the owner-sampler option.

Dairymen continue to benefit from this program since our program is USDA approved, which in essence qualifies owner-sampler herds for young sire programs.

With milk companies demanding the highest of standards in today's competitive world, the somatic cell program continues to be a very beneficial part of the PA DHIA package.

Using the SCC program is helpful in pinpointing lost production due to subclinical (hidden) infections, improper milking procedures, milking equipment malfunctions, percent and level of involvement in the herd, and cows to culture for identification of bacteria causes. Once damaged, cells cannot be replaced until the dry period; production is lost for the entire lactation.

Make money by reducing lost production. Seventy percent of the cost of mastitis is lost milk production. Above all, lost milk plant premiums due to increased herd SCC can be very trying for today's dairy producer.

PA DHIA technicians continue to network through nutritionists, county agents, vets and other ag professionals to bring the highest quality service to you. Please feel free to contact your technician with any questions concerning your PA DHIA record keeping service.

DAVE SLUSSER
General Manager

STATE COLLEGE (Centre Co.) - PA DHIA ushers in a new generation of farm management software with Barn Owl 2000.

Barn Owl is a Windows 95, 98 and NT dairy herd management program which includes heifer management, lab analysis, user- and system-defined reports, charts, genetic evaluation, feed reporting and complete identification including photographs.

The Barn Owl program was written and developed by PA DHIA and dairy farmers were the project leaders.

Several years ago the PA DHIA Dairy Records Processing Center Advisory Committee decided it would be in the best interests of DHIA members for farmers to dictate the needs of their own herd management program.

While there are a number of available herd management programs, most are the results of development by meter manufacturers, universities, or private software developers.

The Barn Owl 2000 program is the first actually written by a DHIA processing center, DHIA technicians, and DHIA members. The DRPC Advisory Committee mandated that the program must be state-of-the-art, easy to use, and affordable.

The project was led by PA DRPC Manager Jim Boyer, whose development team worked closely with DHIA dairymen during the last two years to bring this exciting new program to market.

Barn Owl 2000 provides the management record keeping provided with traditional farm management programs - nearly all of which are still written to the old DOS programming environment - but with the Windows '98 interoperability and usability improvements that most users have come to take for granted.

The program facilitates easy access to the PA DHIA's largest databases and benchmarks via Internet and direct dial service.

Internet access also allows Barn Owl users to download components directly from PA DHIA via the world wide web.

The labAnalyst component of Barn Owl allows dairymen to instantly generate the familiar Somatic Cell and MUN reports just as they appear in the monthly DHIA envelopes, as well as the ability to generate "what-if" scenarios for determining the maximum economic impact of SCC premiums and component pricing down to the individual cow level.

Barn Owl also includes complete life history pages as well as calf pages, which contain treatment history, user defined events, component results, complete production, genetic evaluation, and complete ID.

Identification includes registration numbers, ear tag numbers, visible ID, Barn Name, NAAB Code, Animal Control Number and a photo or sketch of the animal.

Barn Owl exports into the Holstein Association Easy program for electronic registration of animals.

The program allows for an unlimited number and kind of user defined events, limited only by the needs or imagination of the herd manager. The program comes with a number of most commonly used conditions affecting records already "in the can" including, sick, removal, freshening, breeding, body condition, and growth events.

PA DHIA members-cost for the program is $299.95, which also includes both labAnalyst and Heifer '98.

Current licensees of Heifer '98 or labAnalyst may discount the cost of those programs when ordering.

Members who previously purchased the Westfalia DairyPlan through PA DHIA can receive a free upgrade to Barn Owl 2000.

PA DHIA members wishing to upgrade from competitors' software (such as Dairy Comp 305, DairyPlan not purchased through PA DHIA, DairyTrak, and so on) can purchase Barn

Owl for $159.95 with proof of competitive program purchase.

Individuals just purchasing labAnalyst or Heifer '98 can buy either as packages for $29.95.

All purchases come with a money back guarantee if not satisfied with the program after three months use. Each purchase comes with 6 months free support, or one free major update, whichever is longer.

To purchase Barn Owl, contact PA DHIA at 800-DHI-TEST or ask your PA DHIA technician to order it for you.

Are All Milk Replacers Created Equally?

STATE COLLEGE (Centre Co.) - The dairy calf is typically fed a milk replacer for 6 to 8 weeks, or until weaning time.

Farmers wean calves anywhere from 3 weeks of age to several months of age (in extreme cases). It is commonly recommended to wean calves by 6 weeks. But, for most calves during most of the year, it is possible to wean them when they are between 4 and 5 weeks old.

The National average for weaning in 1992 was 8.1 weeks. However this average is likely dropping with progressive farms leading the way toward a four-week weaning age average.

Convenience and economics are the two major factors that are driving farmers to use milk replacers in increasing amounts.

Using milk replacers is often more convenient than feeding milk or waste milk. This is because the calves are generally housed in different areas on the farm than the milking cows, and the transport of salable milk and waste milk is difficult.

Another convenient feature of milk replacers is that they can be manufactured with a variety of ingredients and levels of nutrients to match the management requirements of a large variety of farms. You can mix additives into whole or waste milk, but it may be simpler to mix a milk replacer that already contains vitamins, antibiotics, coccidiostats, or even ionophores.

Milk replacers are composed primarily of by-products from the cheese industry. The casein, or milk protein, that is removed to manufacture dried skim milk - or the casein and fat that are taken out for cheese manufacture - carry much of the cost of the initial milk product. That's why the whey (left over from the casein extraction process) is much cheaper.

While whey's demand on a world market is growing, it still commands a much lower price than skim milk.

Under a typical milk-replacer feeding scenario - feeding 1 pound of replacer that is 20 percent fat every day for eight weeks - the replacer replaces 440 pounds of whole milk for feeding a dairy calf. That's roughly the equivalent of a 50 pound bag of milk replacer.

Fifty pounds of replacer would last until a weaning age of approximately 7 weeks. This comparison assumes you are feeding 8 pounds of whole milk per day - or 1 pound of milk replacer reconstituted to 4 quarts of volume - divided between two feedings per day.

If the price of milk was $12/cwt, then the milk replacer is a good buy because of price alone if it costs less than $52.80 for a 50-pound bag.

If milk price was $13/cwt, then the milk replacer is still a good buy based on price alone, if it is less than $57.20 for a 50-pound bag.

Often farmers feed more than 8 pounds of whole milk per day or more than 4 quarts of reconstituted replacer, but the differences in price remains the same.

The trend for increased use of milk replacers will likely remain in the future as long as the price differential between milk and milk replacers remains.

The composition and quality of a milk replacer will have an influence on the growth, health, and over all performance of calves.

It is important to realize that the composition and nutrient levels vary greatly between different products.

Milk replacers used in the United States are typically composed of whey and whey protein-concentrate compounds. Skim milk is rarely used in any appreciable amounts in the United States due to the cost-per-pound of protein in the products.

Typical sources of milk-replacer ingredients include whey, whey protein concentrate, and delactosed whey. If we make comparisons on a dry matter basis, the cured protein content varies among the sources. Only whey protein concentrate contains a similar level of protein to skim milk.

Some milk replacers contain vegetable proteins which are usually soy based. These include isolated soy protein, soy protein concentrate, or soy flour.

Compared to skim milk, these products contain a higher level of crude protein. However, their protein quality, referring to lysine and methionine inclusion, is slightly less.

The general nutrient recommendation for milk replacer is to be from 18 to 24 percent crude protein, with 20 to 22 percent being the most common.

Crude fat levels can range from 10 to 22 percent. 15 to 20 percent crude fat levels are most often fed and recommended. It is important that major minerals including calcium, phosphorus, and magnesium are balanced - as well as trace elements and vitamins A, D, and E.

Milk replacers should be fed at rates equal to 9 to 14 percent of body weight at birth.

For example, if a calf weighs 90 pounds at birth, it should be fed roughly 9 pounds of milk replacer daily - that's one pound of powder and four quarts of water. This is the amount that should be fed per day until weaning.

Faster rates of growth can be achieved with a higher feeding rate as long as calves start off slowly and are gradually built up in the amounts they are fed every day. This will prevent scours.

During periods of stress (like when calves are housed outside in cold temperatures), the energy density or overall nutrient density of the diet should be increased. This is easily accomplished by increasing the fat level of the replacer or increasing the amount of the replacer fed per day by 30 to 50 percent.

To conclude, just remember the following points:

- In most circumstances, milk replacer is more economical to feed as compared with whole milk.
- There are many different milk

replacers from which to choose. The producer should check milk-replacer labels closely to evaluate their ingredients.

• The amount of protein and fat levels that should be used in milk replacers will depend on the calf, its environment, and its health. Also, milk replacers come with various additives that can help achieve healthy well-growing calves.

Milk replacers are only one part of the diet. Alone, milk replacers cannot help the calf achieve optimal growth rates. The ideal feeding program is one that includes milk replacer.

Farm Management

DEALING WITH AN EMPLOYEE'S NEGATIVE ATTITUDE

ANDREW MARTIN
Penn State Multi County
Farm Management Agent

Can you fire a farm employee for a bad attitude? The answer to this question depends. I have had people tell me that they've had employees who do very good work but have very bad attitudes. Their attitude can be so bad that it spreads like wild seeds planted on fertile ground and can affect the inner dynamics of all the employees.

You can fire an employee for having a bad attitude under certain circumstances. Check with your lawyer first because laws have a way of changing. But before making that call, consider the following.

Many states have an "At-Will Doctrine." The California Labor Codes states, "An employment having no specified term may be terminated at the will of either party..." An example of this would be if an employee said, "Mr. Farmer, I have found a new job, and I will no longer be working for you." Most people feel there is nothing wrong with that statement. The "At-Will Doctrine" helps reinforce that statement. It also helps preserve the right for an employer to say to an employee, "I will no longer be needing your services."

Erosion of the "At-Will Doctrine" has come from many places, including the anti discrimination laws, antiretaliation laws, whistle-blowing protection, right to "concerted activity," constructive discharge, and litigation. One must avoid using words or making statements such as "permanent" or "...as long as you do a good job, we will have work for you..." that can create an implied contract.

How can you be reassured that the "At-Will Doctrine" will hold up in a court of law? Implement an "At-Will Doctrine" on your farm. This policy could be simply stated, "We reserves the right to terminate an employee at any time for any reason, just as the employee has the right to quit at any time for any reason." In other words, it is an at-will attitude that means the employer can fire when he or she wants, and the employee can leave when he or she wants. It becomes a two-way street. Unfortunately, a lack of professional courtesy can result from this "At-Will Doctrine." Most employers like to have two weeks notice before an employee leaves. Most employees like to have adequate time to be able to locate a new job. A sense of security for both parties is involved.

In contrast to the "At-Will Doctrine" is the "Just Cause Approach." It's found in the Grievance Guide published by the Bureau of National Affairs. It states, "The 'Just Cause' principle sums up the test used by the employee in judging whether management acted fairly in enforcing company rules." There are five principles for effective discipline.

1. There need to be fair rules and consequences. For almost any misbehavior, there are many shades of wrongdoing. Also, match fault with punishment, have a guide for fairness of your response, and use progressive discipline.

2. The employer should clearly communicate policies. The employer should give the employees examples of rules and consequences.

3. The case of an investigation, the employer should conduct it fairly. There should be a preliminary interview. Could the employee's action have some justification? A disciplinary interview would follow. In this case, do not force a response, and allow time for self-control. Do not reduce violation seriousness and maintain objectivity. Always temper justice with mercy. Try to avoid false accusations. A rule of thumb is, "The greater the accusation, the greater the proof needed."

The interview may involve witnesses and searches. Here are some guidelines if you must conduct a search. Conduct a search only after a thorough investigation, there is substantial evidence, and written permission. If there is a refusal, document the employee's refusal. Be discreet, and use a professional manner. In some cases, it might be more preferable to call the police than to force a search. Avoid physical or emotional imprisonment. Ask the employee if a tape recorder can be used and consider having witnesses.

4. Balance consistency and flexibility. To do this, there are four things to consider: severity of the incident, the employee's attitude, their previous history, and mitigating circumstances. Also, to help keep the balance, avoid too many exceptions, and an employer should not have to apologize to an employee. Supervisors can discuss critical incidents of worker misconduct, but protect the worker's anonymity when possible. Always remember that rules may be added, clarified, or dropped.

5. Apply corrective, not punitive, action. The supervisor must act as if truly interested in helping the worker with the problem. Punitive action is aggressive, applied hastily, or out of line with the offense. If an employer has been lazy with enforcement of a rule, alert employees of changes in enforcement or change the rules. Before applying the consequence, try to understand the employee's perspective, conduct an investigation if necessary, and formulate a fair response. Find positive aspects of the employee's work. Sometimes an employer might want to suspend the employee before firing. This is called an investigative suspension. There are follow-up interviews, a careful decision, contact made with an attorney, and a final paycheck is prepared.

Obviously, the ideal situation is to hire hard-working, satisfied, perfect employees. But since this rarely happens, employers need to know how to deal with less than ideal situations. It's easy to hire, but you should know how to legally fire. Do your homework by calling specialists such as the Pennsylvania Farm Bureau at (717) 761-2740 for their advice. Then sit down with your legal advisor and prepare a clearly written company manual.

Giant Hogweed Eradication Program Finds No New Sightings

VERNON ACHENBACH JR.
Lancaster Farming Staff
HARRISBURG (Dauphin Co.) — A couple of weeks ago the state Department of Agriculture announced that a non-native plant, a relative of the common wild carrot, had been added to the state's list of noxious weeds and that people who sighted the giant relative should report it to the department.

It had already been listed as a noxious weed by the federal government, and it is illegal to propagate, sell or transport.

The plant is called Giant Hogweed and it is in the same family of plant species as the wild carrot and parsley.

The purpose for reporting any sightings to the PDA is because the goal is to eradicate the species from Pennsylvania. The federal government is working with state officials to ensure its eradication from Pennsylvania.

While the description of the plant included in a news release was, and is, accurate, there are some native and naturalized relatives of the Giant Hogweed that can fall within the description provided.

According to PDA plant specialist Will Mountain, the plant most closely resembling Giant Hogweed is Cow Parsnip, though there are some differences.

Cow parsnip isn't rare, but it's not common either.

The Giant Hogweed is named that such because its dimensions are seemingly more in sync with the dimension of dinosaurs.

This week, after checking out a report of a suspicious plant in Lebanon County, Mountain provided more information on the Giant Hogweed, to allow better identification tools for Pennsylvania residents.

The plant Mountain inspected this week turned out to be Poison Hemlock — a member of the same family somewhat similar in appearance, except for the leaves.

Poison hemlock, the plant historically associated with the murder of Socrates, is not a native plant species either, but it is widespread.

(As a side note, Mountain noted that the central Pennsylvania poison control center has never reported any incidents of accidental poisoning from Poison Hemlock, despite its prevalence.)

Mountain said that since publicizing the eradication effort and the Hogweed hotline PDA plant specialists have been checking out reports and luckily have not verified any additional plants outside the northwest region of the state, where it has been discovered in Erie, Warren, Crawford, Venango, and McKean counties. (The hotline is good only for the northwest region. It is 1-877-464-9333. Others should contact a regional office, the state office in Harrisburg, or a local Penn State Extension office.)

However, Mountain said verifying that the suspected plant was not Giant Hogweed, but Poison Hemlock, was not a waste of time.

"It's important for us to check out any suspicious plants," Mountain said. "No one should feel bad if the plant isn't Giant Hogweed. That's good that it isn't."

The primary reason for the concerted effort to eradicate any specimens of Giant Hogweed from Pennsylvania is that it exudes a chemical that on human skin can cause severe blistering, pain, scarring, and permanent discoloration.

According to a Cornell University Cooperative Extension publication on the pest, "Giant hogweed might not be a weed worth trying to control were it not for its potential to cause severe skin irritations.

"The sap of the plant, which contains a glucoside called furanocoumarin, can cause painful, burning blisters in susceptible people. The plant juices also can produce painless red blotches that later develop into purplish or blackened scars.

"Simply touching the leaves of the weed does not produce this dermatitis, which is known medically as phytophotodermatitis.

"The blisters or blotches are likely to develop when sap from a broken portion of the plant comes into contact with the skin in the presence of moisture and the skin is then exposed to sunlight. The skin irritation usually appears within a few days after exposure."

The publication also states that, "The only known antidote is immediately to wash the skin thoroughly with soap and water."

Cornell University, which provides cooperative extension programs in New York state, is much more familiar with the plant, which was introduced into New York in the early 1900s as a garden exotic.

It grows from 6 feet to 14 feet high, has leaves up to 5 feet in length, and produces a flat-topped flower cluster (like Queen Anne's Lace) up to 30-inches in diameter.

The leaves of the smooth-skinned Poison Hemlock are finely divided like a carrot top, whereas the Hogweed leaves are compound, broader, and roughly divided, more like ragweed leaves. It has a rough, hairy skin.

The stems of the Giant Hogweed range from 2-inches to 4-inches in diameter, and the leaf stalks are clothed with deep purple, and the lower stems are ribbed.

A purposefully imported plant from Eurasia, specifically the Caucasus region, it became popular in English gardens to the point of being prominent in the English landscape by the 1970s, according to Cornell Extension.

It was introduced into New York and cultivated in Highland park in Rochester in 1917, according to the Extension publication.

"Although once cultivated as an unusual ornamental, Giant Hogweed is now regarded as an undesirable weed that poses a serious health threat because the sap of the plant causes a painful and acute skin irritation in many people," the literature states.

Mountain said some people are immune to its affects, much as some people are not affected by the sap of poison ivy, while others are extremely sensitive.

The size of Giant Hogweed gives it away, in addition to the distinguishing differences between Hogweed and Cow Parsnip (no purple on the plant, not as rough and hairy, grows to 8-foot height) and Angelica, another species in the family with similar leaves and structure (except the flower clusters are rounded and much smaller, the skin is purple, smooth and it has hairless stems).

Color brochures on the plant with information and symptoms of exposure are available from the state Department of Agriculture.

CEILING INLETS AND ATTIC HEAT
Eileen F. Wheeler
Assistant Professor

Environmental Control
Agricultural and Biological Engineering Department

Within layer hen housing, increased air exchange is being used to remove bird body heat 6 to 7 cubic feet per minute (cfm) per bird is now common. Up to 9 cfm/bird is used in hot, southern states.

Building construction restrictions at the eaves, which inhibit bringing this large volume of air into the house, have led to inlet design changes.

Modifications such as ceiling inlets over each cage row may be criticized as being too costly, yet they do enhance fresh air movement at lower cage levels. At least one study has found that the ceiling inlet-ventilated houses had less temperature variation throughout the house than similar houses with only eave inlets. Producers need more information to evaluate when this additional cost may be justified and how it influences bird environment.

Normally poultry house attics are hot because of their exposure to solar load from uninsulated roofing material and limited air exchange. Air entering a caged layer house through the attic in ceiling inlet houses is often presumed to be at a significantly higher temperature than air entering at the eaves of a perimeter inlet house. Warm incoming air would lead to increased bird stress during hot summer conditions.

The counter argument, that both ceiling and perimeter eave inlets would have similar incoming air temperatures, is based on the limited heat gain which would be experienced when over half a million cubic feet of air per minute (cfm) is moved through the attic space during hot weather.

How much warmer is ceiling inlet air than perimeter inlet air? This was a question addressed through a Pennsylvania Egg Research Program funded study this past summer.

The study site had two conventional high-rise layer houses, one with perimeter eave inlets and the other with ceiling inlets over each cage row. The two houses were of similar construction, age, width (54 feet x 532 feet conventional and 54 feet x 616 feet ceiling inlet), pit conditions, and density of birds in stairstep cages. Exhaust fans were located in the pit sidewalls of each house.

The perimeter inlet house had six cage rows, three racks high, with 108,000 DeKalb birds, 31 weeks old at the start of the experiment. The ceiling inlet house had six cage rows, three racks high, with 125,000 Hy-Line birds (post molted), and 72 weeks old at the start.

Several temperature sensors were positioned within the attic space of each house. Outdoor air temperature sensors were positioned within the attic space of each house. Outdoor air temperature was represented by fresh air just as it was entering the building. Data was collected for 10 days during July 1998, with the three hottest days chosen for analysis.

In the conventional attic on the perimeter eave inlet house, the whole attic was hot on a hot day. One might expect the temperature at the peak to be much warmer because of temperature stratification, but there was only a 3°F difference between attic floor level and peak height. The attic was up to 20°F warmer than the outdoor temperature. That's hot on a 90°F day. Under cloudy conditions, this gain may be only 6° to 8°F.

In the ceiling inlet, it was clear that fresh air entered the attic space, traveled along the floor of the attic, and was drawn into one of the inlets, thus entering the hen house. The air in the upper part of the attic space was relatively undisturbed by the large amount of air flowing along the floor.

This data coincides with what we experience when we visit the attic in one of these houses. It may appear warm, and indeed at human head height, it is rather warm. But at ankle level, the airflow is at outdoor temperature. The air only picked up 1° to 2°F in traveling through the attic even during the hottest part of the hottest day we evaluated. In fact, there was less temperature variation across the attic than there was across the cage rows in these houses... but that is another article.

But let's look at the whole picture here. Heat gain from solar load on the attic space on both these buildings had to be very similar since they were next to each other with the same orientation to the sun. The ceiling inlet house attic temperature near the ridge was at a 100°F high at midday on the hottest study day. In the perimeter inlet house on the same day and time, the maximum attic temperature was around 110°F. This 10°F attic temperature difference between the two houses had to go somewhere and it likely went into the ceiling inletted poultry house over the course of the day.

This heat then had to be removed from the hen house over the course of the day. Fortunately, the temperature of ceiling inlet air is not significantly warmer than perimeter inlet air during the hottest part of the day.

This data should alleviate concerns of significant heat stress on birds in ceiling inlet houses. The benefits of more effective air distribution found within the cage rows of some ceiling inlet houses may outweigh any slight temperature gain by replacing it with enhanced air speed over the birds. At the higher air exchange rate that we are demanding in current layer houses, bringing air in through the attic is better than trying to force it all through a restrictive perimeter eave inlet. The reduced radiant load on the birds from a cooler ceiling in the ceiling inlet house is another advantage.

With the high air exchange employed in layer houses, there is not much time for air to gain heat as it moves across the attic width toward the ceiling inlets.

Massey Ferguson Offers Powershuttle Transmission For Tractors

ATLANTA, Ga. — "The increasing demand for our new 4200 Series mid-range tractors for loader and other applications that require frequent forward and reverse direction changes has lead us to make further improvements for 1999," said Tim Wagner, Massey Ferguson product marketing manager.

"Our 4200 Series tractors earned the OEMmie Award for innovative design and performance in the mid-range class - a cost-conscious sector where performance and reliability are needed in a wide variety of applications," Wagner said.

"Now Massey Ferguson adds to the performance and versatility of the 4200 Series with the addition of a PowerShuttle featuring our exclusive Comfort-Control that enables the operator to adjust the rate of transition between forward and reverse shuttle changes."

MF 4200 Series tractors provide a diverse range of technology and features. To help customers choose the tractor that meets their precise needs without unwanted features or options, Massey Ferguson offers two model series - the "3" series and the "5" series.

MF 4200 "3" series tractors combine value with the basic features needed to handle the widest range of agricultural and industrial applications. They are identified by the following model numbers — 4233 (65 hp), 4243 (75 hp), 4253 (85 hp), and 4263 (90 hp) — the last number in the model designation is always a "3".

MF 4200 "5" series tractors offer value and added performance and comfort features wanted by customers for increased productivity or for specialized applications. The model numbers are 4225 (55 hp), 4235 (65 hp), 4245 (75 hp), 4255 (85 hp), and 4270 (99 hp).

All MF 4200 Series tractors are available in both cab and platform models and two and four-wheel drive configurations. For added versatility, there are also high visibility models with a steeply slanted hood for improved forward visibility in loader work.

Three high-visibility cab models, the 4245, 4255 and 4270

now offer greatly improved high forward visibility from the operator's seat with the option of a glass panel Visi-Roof. Visibility in front-end loader operations, such as stacking large square bales to maximum height, is improved by up to 13 feet. The roof panel can be opened for ventilation if required.

The high performance "5" series tractors (65 to 99 hp) are now equipped with an all new 12x12 forward and reverse PowerShuttle as standard equipment. A 24x24 PowerShuttle transmission which incorporates the proven Massey Ferguson Speedshift is optional.

Conference Promotes Service In Home Communities

COLUMBUS, Ohio — More than 450 teens from around Ohio will gather on the Columbus campus of Ohio State University to participate in leadership, citizenship and educational activities during the 83rd Ohio 4-H Youth Expo.

The annual conference, which takes place June 16-18, lets 4-H'ers focus on an area of interest, participate in a related service project and learn strategies for initiating similar activities at home.

The service-learning component of Youth Expo was introduced last year, said Allen Auck, an Ohio State University Extension Associate, 4-H Youth Development, who is coordinating the program. Based on the response of the 4-H'ers and the community, the conference is continuing the service-based programs this year.

On Thursday, June 17, the 4-H'ers will participate in small group, all-day, hands-on workshops on topics such as clowning, horticulture, rocket science and pet therapy. The next day, the same groups will perform community services that incorporate the materials from Thursday's workshops. They will clown for patients at a local hospital; build wheelchair gardens; teach children how to build water rockets with 2-liter pop bottles; and take pets to visit residents at a Columbus-area retirement village.

"4-H has always valued giving something back to the community," Auck said. "Youth Expo will help give teen leaders the tools they need to implement more formal community service projects in their hometowns."

Conference delegates also will tour Ohio State's campus, experience college life by staying in student dorms, and take part in a variety of recreational and social events. Any youth ages 14 to 19 and in 4-H can attend the summer youth conference.

Wendy's International, American Dairy Association & Dairy Council Mid East, and the Ohio 4-H Foundation are major sponsors of Ohio Youth Expo.

You have already shown us more than 350 old photographs that show families, places, and events involved in farming during the period from 1900 to the present. But we want to see more. The deadline is June 30, 1999. Any subject related to agriculture is acceptable. If you have any old photographs you would allow us to consider for this fascinating project, please send them to us or drop them off at Lancaster Farming's office at 1 E Main St., Ephrata, PA 17522.

Please include all pertinent information about each photograph and include your own name, address and phone number so we can return the photos to you when we have published the book.

If you have any questions call our editor at 717-721-4425. Space may prohibit us from printing every photo submitted, but all photos will be returned to their owners unharmed.

16 FERTILIZER

FOUR SIMPLE STEPS TO SUCCESS

Farm For Profit Step 1 SOIL MANAGEMENT ACHIEVE

- Contains nutrients and feeders which aid in sustaining microorganisms in the soil

REMEDY

- Contains nutrients and micronutrients which aid in sustaining microorganisms in the soil

TANK MIXING

STEP 2 PLANT NUTRITION & STEP 1

We have found be adding 12.8 oz. of Remedy and a small amount of Achieve per acre to the recommended amount of Farm For Profit Step 2 True Solution Starter Fertilizer and applying directly on the seed or in the seed cradle we got outstanding results

Farm For Profit Step 2 PLANT NUTRITION FARM FOR PROFIT TRUE SOLUTION STARTER FERTILIZER

- Near neutral pH
- 100% available
- Root zone placement
- Low salt index
- Foliar Feeding.

Farm For Profit has established their own standard for quality. Unlike many liquid fertilizers, Farm For Profit True Solution Starter Fertilizer is a solution. It is not just particles suspended in liquid. Each drop contains the exact N-P-K ratio of the standard formulation. Farm For Profit liquid fertilizer is consistent and stable and won't settle out. It handles easily. It can be stored indefinitely. When it is applied, it flows evenly and cleanly. Farm For Profit True Solution Starter Fertilizer meets our standard for quality.

Farm For Profit Step 3 VEGETABLE OIL

- 1 Encapsulates the chemical
- 2 Helps generate uniform droplet size
- 3 Greatly reduces chemical evaporation
- 4 Reduces chemical drift
- 5 Increases the coverage because of its spreading and sticking ability
- 6 Reduces chemical wash off
- 7 Gives you better control of the chemicals

One of Farm For Profit's main concerns is the level of soil and water pollution found today. Our goal is to remove as much petroleum base material and farm chemical from the soil as possible. Farm For Profit Step 3 Vegetable Oil gives us a means to reduce the level of both petroleum base materials and farm chemicals.

Farm For Profit Step 4 TRAINED FIELD PERSONNEL

The Farm For Profit Authorized Distributor or Dealer in Your Area Will

- Explain the total Farm For Profit program to you
- Explain the best fertilizer program for your operation
- Suggest ways to improve the efficiency of your chemical program
- Explain to you what other farmers have been doing to cut their operating expenses while maintaining or increasing their production output

IN ALUMINUM BODIES EBY BUILDS IT

M. H. Eby custom-builds aluminum truck bodies for the agri-transportation market. Nobody offers more sizes and options in:

- FLATBED BODIES - Lengths to 32', choice of 5 widths.
- GRAIN BODIES - Lengths to 24', landscape and general purpose dumps to 12'
- LANDSCAPE BODIES - Lengths to 12'. We'll build to your specs!

For greater payload capacity, Eby's aluminum design is equal in strength to steel and up to 40% lighter. Our corrosion-resistant components never need painting. That means minimum maintenance, improved appearance and higher resale value.

Eby products have superior standard features. And we offer customer options for virtually any application. Agriculture is your business - building bodies to haul it is ours.

President Lincoln Addresses N.Y. Farm Bureau Delegates

SYRACUSE, N.Y. — New York Farm Bureau President John Lincoln gave his annual address to nearly 500 member-delegates and guests attending the 42nd annual meeting in Syracuse.

During his 25-minute presentation, the dairy farmer from Ontario County gave highlights of the year and insight as to what he sees for the future of agriculture in New York State.

Lincoln stated, I am very proud to be the president of this great organization. No matter where I go across this large state of ours and no matter whom I talk with, the respect and admiration that others have for this organization never wavers. To carry the message of New York agriculture, on behalf of the farmer tilling the land, to the halls of our state capitol and to Washington is an honor that few will ever know. I have always treasured that opportunity and have never taken the responsibility lightly."

Lincoln also spoke about the many storms that have plagued the farmers of this state and the financial help that New York Farm Bureau sought and won on their behalf. In addition, he highlighted the elimination of the second year of the property tax reform program, estate tax changes, workers' compensation reform measures, and increases in membership as highlights of the year.

Lincoln told the crowd that New York Farm Bureau has taken several steps toward education the non-farm public. He cited in particular New York Farm Bureau's Foundation for Agricultural Education and the recent television commercial which reminds viewers that farmers feed all of us every day.

Lincoln also warned the attendees that, "Today there exists a situation quite possibly worse than any storm Mother Nature could muster; the Food Quality Protection Act, which, if implemented improperly, could devastate our industry. If implemented improperly, the FQPA could reduce our chemical availability by 95 percent. Many of us would go out of business. Period."

He said, "For agriculture to survive and grow, farms need to be profitable; we need better markets—nationally and globally; we need less governmental regulation and more cooperation, both voluntary and incentive-based programs; and we need a public that understands the contributions of the agriculture industry and supports farmers."

Lincoln was elected to his third term as president of the 29,260 member family organization.

STATE COLLEGE (Centre Co.) - The 15-member Penn State Poultry Science Club drew a crowd of 60 parents, industry representatives, Penn State faculty and administrators, and alumni to its ninth annual awards banquet April 30 here at the Ramada Inn.

Penn State Ag Science Dean Robert Steele told the banquet attendees it is an exciting time in the college and in the department, and there is a need for continued interaction between the college and industry. This interaction has led to jobs for all the currently graduating seniors in poultry science as well as summer internships for many students, and companies need more graduates to fill job openings.

Jim Reed, CEO and executive vice president of Empire Kosher Poultry in Mifflintown, was the featured speaker of the evening. He described Empire Kosher as the "world's tallest midget," since the company sells 70 percent of the kosher chicken and 90 percent of the kosher turkey in the United States, which is only a small percentage of the

At Empire Kosher, which is the largest employer of rabbinical tradesmen in the United States processing goes by 3,000-year-old Jewish laws Rabbis hand-slaughter all birds in contrast to the electrical stun method used on 99.5 percent of all other processed poultry. Instead of scalding the birds in hot water, birds are soaked in cold water, then salt, which kills bacteria and makes the meat more tender and juicy.

Reed believes this process, along with a better bleed-out and picking, had led to Empire Kosher products coming in first in many taste tests. Of the 1.4

Family Farm Cooperative Proves Successful

DONALD C. FRETTS
Fayette County
Extension Agent

The first results from the beef test market conducted last fall and early winter of 25 cattle finished to the specifications of the steering committee, for the proposed Pennsylvania Family Farm Cooperative, were presented to the committee on April 10.

While many of the results were positive, additional questions were discovered that need answers before the organization of a new farmer-owned cooperative would be plausible.

Following are some of the positive results of the test market.

Restaurant Market Test

The restaurant initiative of marketing directly to restaurants proved to be a definitive possibility, but it also brought some additional obstacle to the forefront that would need to be addressed before a commercial marketing program could be profitable.

Five reputable restaurants purchased a variety of cuts ranging from hamburger to filet mignon, which were served to their customers. While not all customer surveys were completed, 86 were completed with 87 percent rating their dinners very good to excellent, and 79 percent indicating good value for the money spent.

Sixty-three percent also indicated noticing a difference between Keystone Beef and beef dinners served to them in the past. Additionally, 72 percent indicated they would purchase Keystone Beef dinners again without hesitation and 15 percent indicated a "maybe." Finally, 73 percent of the respondents indicated that "locally produced" was a major attribute that could influence the purchase of Keystone brand beef.

Beef Market Survey

Two other groups were surveyed following the consumption of Keystone brand beef — those who attended the Pennsylvania Association for Sustainable Agriculture Convention in State College, and a random sampling of shoppers at the Uniontown Mall.

While each of the two groups of consumers may exhibit different personal values and ideals, the actual product served them was very satisfying to their tastes.

Additional conclusions reached include:

- "Locally produced," "raised without growth hormones," and "no antibiotically treated feed" were three of the production standards considered to be important by the consumers.
- Freshness, flavor, and color were important to the consumer groups.
- Most of the respondents indicated they would pay a premium for beef with the qualities of Keystone beef.
- To date, most consumers don't purchase precooked entrees or dinners, but 25 percent of the mall respondents did indicate a once-a-week tendency.

Kosher Market

All of the animals were processed to meet Kosher standards and approximately half of the front quarters of beef were sold to the ethnic community. The economic result was an increase of about 20-cent per carcass pound of value that could be earned from the specific marketing opportunity.

Carcass Data Report

As part of the proposed quality standards adopted by the steering committee, specific carcass quality standards were adopted which were very similar to the Certified Angus Beef and Certified Hereford Beef standards.

- They are:
- Quality grade: upper two thirds Choice or higher
 - Yield grade: 3.5 or leaner
 - Ribeye area: 11.0-13.0 square inches
 - Age at slaughter: less than 20 months
 - Carcass weight: 600 - 750 pounds.

The following table illustrates some of the data collected from individual animals.

The six animals included in the table illustrate very well the similarity and diversity of the carcass traits available during the test market.

Most of the animals graded choice, most were under .4 inches backfat, most produced ribeyes within the parameters, most produced under 3 percent kidney, pelvic and heart fat, most had some marbling, but about half were above the desirable carcass weight.

All in all, with proper sire selection and good management, meeting the desirable carcass quality standards would not be a major obstacle.

What Is Next?

After examining the data collected, the steering committee has decided to explore additional opportunities that have been identified, such as marketing directly to selected retail outlets, and exploring the opportunities presented by the Pennsylvania Association for Sustainable Agriculture Community FARM Initiative. This opportunity might include the marketing of a branded hamburger product. Also, a third goal is to acquire additional data relative to carcass shrink losses as a result of the dry aging process.

Several committees were also appointed, including supply, distribution/marketing, capitalization and business plan.

Within several months, the additional data will be collected and summarized, the committees will present preliminary reports, and additional decisions will be made regarding the potential of developing the cooperative.

If anyone is interested in becoming more involved with this beef marketing study, contact Don Fretts at the Fayette County extension office, Don Gardner, from Washington County, and Sam Hunt or Louise DIsidoro, from Fayette County.

Wills Spring Fair A Success

TANEYTOWN, Md. — The Wills Sprig 4-H and FFA Fair, a one-day show at the Howard County Fairgrounds was conducted recently. Counties across Maryland meet to show their animals and learn more about their animals and how to show them, so they are a little more prepared when they show at their own county fair.

Members of the Progressive Clovers 4-H Club that exhibited dairy goats, poultry, and rabbits were Jason, Amy, and Kevin Ridinger.

Jason Ridinger at the dairy goat show had best doe in show, grand champion recorded grade and senior champion recorded grade with "Ridinger's Easter 'EB' Bonnet." Jason also had reserve grand champion recorded grade, reserve senior champion recorded grade with "Ridinger's Magic Elm." He also had junior champion recorded grade with "Ridinger's Easter Bunny." Also shown were grand champion alpine and senior champion alpine with "Ridinger's Hope."

At the poultry show, Jason exhibited reserve supreme grand champion of show and grand champion large fowl with million orthodox Jews in the U.S. who eat kosher foods, Empire Kosher Poultry sells to 72 percent of that market. Although its products are the second most expensive, its market is broadening.

Empire Kosher exemplifies the trend toward integrated processors in the poultry business, which Reed said has grown at a rate of 5.6 percent a year for the last few years. By contracting through processing companies, growers no longer have to assume all the risks, such as disease or weather, or worry about having enough investment capital, he pointed out. Processors are then able to prevent overproduction leading to disastrous price drops, such as occurred recently in the pork industry, he said.

Reed, who is a University of Pennsylvania Wharton Business School graduate and has 25 years of business experience, thinks that the competition of a capitalist free trade market works the best, if not perfectly.

He cited Israel's use of government subsidies and tariffs as a system that doesn't do a good job of setting prices and compensating producers and processors for the risks they take.

Nutrient management and use of antibiotics are two of the major issues in agriculture, Reed commented. Recent federal crackdowns on manure spreading practices and the requirement for a nutrient management program to be in place will continue to have an impact on the way livestock producers do business.

Reed believes that mutations in bacterial strains necessitates continued research for new antibiotics at pharmaceutical companies. He urged politicians to "put science behind legislation" regarding antibiotics and producers not to use antibiotics for growth promotion.

Advice Reed gave to students, which he said he wished someone had given him whom he was starting out in business, included:

- Don't be afraid to work in a production plant early in your career. You need the experience to advance, and it will benefit the plat. Work on your skill competency.

- Live a balanced life. You need to work hard, but you also need to spend time playing and doing things with our family. Get a good night's sleep.

- There are no silver bullets to solve problems, only a series of "small solutions."

- Entropy is not just a principle of physics--you get from people what you give to them. Assess people by their attitude and balance. When managing people, treat them respectfully and make them do what needs to be done.

- Undercommit and overdeliver. Find a job you can enjoy, and enjoy the job you get.

Stephanie Bowman received the Presidential Award for her service as club president for the past year as well as the Hardest Working Individual Award Club vice president Jason Martin had the highest grade point average in the poultry science major, and Heather Lehman had the highest GPA overall. Steph Molnar won the Most Active Club Member trophy.

In his review of the year's activities, club advisor Dirk Wise reported that club alumni had established an Industry Alliance Scholarship Award Fund. Recipients will have their names on a permanent trophy displayed at the poultry research firm. The first two recipients were Roxanne Kirst (1997) and Jason Martin (1998).

In addition to the club's annual activities - including participation in the Penn State Products Spectacular and Ag Olympics and the Southeast Poultry Show in Atlanta, Ga having fall and spring turkey sales, selling chicken sandwiches at the Farm Show, and taking a fall trip to Empire Kosher - the club worked with a local food bank as a service project.

Fisher & Thompson Named One Of Top 10

ELK GROVE VILLAGE, Ill. — Fisher & Thompson, Inc., Leola, has earned the distinction of being one of Westfalia Dairy Systems' top 10 North American dealers for 1998.

Fisher & Thompson owners are Amos Fisher, Rick Thompson, and Merle Ressler. The company represents Westfalia's complete line of milking and cooling equipment as well as other equipment and suppliers which support their customers.

As a Westfalia Dairy Systems "Diamond Achiever" for 1998, Fisher & Thompson was not only a dealer in good standing, but was evaluated on their total sales volume of new products and parts in their respective trade areas.

According to Rob Kolb, communications manager for Westfalia, "Fisher & Thompson has demonstrated an outstanding commitment to Westfalia and based on their overall sales volume for the year, is clearly among the top 10 dealers."

In operation since 1983, Fisher & Thompson serves dairy farmers in a large geographic area that roughly includes central and eastern Pennsylvania, northern Maryland, New Jersey, and Delaware. The company has four warehouse locations and 38 employees.

According to Thompson, "We're a very service-oriented business with an incredibly diverse customer base. Our valued customers include everything from electricity-free Amish farms with a dozen or two cows to highly-computerized operations with more than 1,000 cows."

Thompson adds that their dealership's success is based on following a simple business model: "Surround yourself with good people and good things happen — we really have great employees."

Round Balers Built To Last

NEW HOLLAND (Lancaster Co.) — New Holland's new "8 Series" Roll-Belt™ round balers are engineered to produce better bales season after season. The all-new Roll-Belt round baler line features five sizes plus a silage baler which consistently turn out dense, uniform, square-shouldered bales that stand up to weather and transport.

Strength and durability have been built into each model. Larger chain idler springs to maintain proper tension, beefier bearings for follower rolls and drive rolls, heavy-duty cam-follower bearings in wide pickups, stronger pickup lift cranks, heavy-duty wheel hubs and long-lasting, curved pickup tines have been included in the new line.

To meet the demand for 5-foot x 5-foot bales, New Holland has introduced the new Model 678. This round baler produces bales with a soft core for easier feeding, grinding and shredding, and 5-foot x 5-foot bales are more stable on hillsides, hold their shape better, and stay in place when using a bale spear.

Other models in the "8 Series" line include: Model 638 (4-foot x 4-foot bales), Model 648 (4-foot x 5-foot bales), Model 648 Silage Special (4-foot x 5-foot silage bales), Model 658 (4-foot x 6-foot bales), and Model 688 (5-foot x 6-foot bales).

The Model 648 Silage Special is available with the Bale-Slice™ system which makes heavier, denser bales that are easy to break apart and feed. In a recent Penn State University study, bales pro-

Hesston Introduces Round Balers

ATLANTIC, Ga. — Hesston, a leader in hay tool technology, has developed three new variable chamber round balers that produce high-quality bales in sizes that meet the ever-changing hay market demands. The new additions to the already extensive round baler line-up offered by Hesston, come equipped with new features, increased crop capacities, and proven durability.

Building on the existing Hesston round baler line, the new 845, 855 and 856 series balers provide the producer with an answer to current market demands. The model 845 produces a 4-foot x 5-foot bale of 1,000 pounds, the 855 a 5-foot x 5-foot bale of 1,610 pounds and the 856 produces a 5-foot x 6-foot bale of 2,320 pounds.

One of the many improvements made to the 800 series balers are wider, low-profile pickup assemblies for minimal crop loss and efficient feeding into the bale chamber. Additional capacity improvements to the pickup assemblies include centering augers and stuffer fingers that move crop into the bale throat. Gauge wheels on each end of the pickup assemblies also give the unit ground-hugging capabilities to further protect against crop loss and pickup damage. Pickup adjustment is accomplished with a simple crank handle or optional hydraulic lift, while the easy-access chain drive and slip clutch protection further add to the convenience.

"Our improved pickup assemblies allow the balers to efficiently gather and feed crop into the chamber, thus eliminating waste that may occur," said Ron Hess, general marketing manager for Hesston. "These new variable chamber round balers produce tightly packed dry bales that are high in feed value and meet industry size requirements."

Vintage Sales Hires Former Dunlap Employees

PARADISE (Lancaster Co.) — With the closing of the long-running Walter M. Dunlap and Sons Inc. auction, based at the Lancaster Stockyards, Vintage Livestock Auction, based here, has seen an increase in sales.

Vintage, which conducts sales at the auction yard every Monday and Tuesday, also has picked up several of the workers from Dunlap's.

According to Ken Hershey, field representative at Vintage, two full-time and two part-time employees, with quite a few years experience, were hired from Dunlap's. The full-time workers include fieldmen Butch Brown and Leon Hoover. Part-time workers hired by Vintage include Ivan Nolt and Joe Reiff.

Leon Hoover worked back in the 1960s for Vintage and came to Dunlap's in 1972. Hoover started at Vintage in 1961 and has been in the auction business about 41 years.

Butch Brown worked at the Lancaster Stockyards for 12 years. Nolt worked at Dunlap's for about 20 years, and Joe Reiff worked at Dunlap for about a dozen years.

Vintage Livestock Auction was founded in 1953 and employs 20-25, about nine full-time, including the children of owner L. Robert Frame. Vintage Sales has conducted auctions since the 1940s, noted Frame. Frame took

The Monday sale includes heifers, bulls, finishing steers, and butcher cows. Monday the auction is open to receiving sheep and goats.

On Tuesday, the auction conducts sales of cows, sheep, goats, and feeders. Sale reports on Vintage are a regular feature of Lancaster Farming.

L. Robert Frame, Vintage Livestock Auction owner, said that because of Dunlap's going out of business, the amount of cattle at Vintage has increased.

Frame noted that, starting Wednesday, the auction began a private hog sale.

The late Mr. Craig Askins, a retired dairy farmer, began breeding Belgium and Morgan horses in 1973. In the early 1980's, he began seriously collecting horse drawn carnages, wagons and horse drawn farm equipment to show the horses in parades and for various displays in the Powell, Delaware & Worthington areas. In 1989, in recognition of his 60 years of farming, over 500 family and friends gathered at the farm for a grand celebration. Mr. Askins touched the lives of many school children, youth groups and inner-city children by giving hay rides, picnics and sharing his love of horses, carnages, wagons and other collectibles. It is our honor to represent this collection on public auction. Plan now to be with us at the start of the auction on Saturday, June 19th.
